The Monkey and the Masses

Mr. Ryan, All Copper Men

Hark, Hark, the Lawyers

$250,000,000 in Jewels

—By Arthur Brisbane—

WHAT IS THE average level of civilization among human beings? When the airship R-100 reached England, returning across the ocean, only a gathering of 50 friends and relatives of passengers and crew, plus a few stragglers, welcomed the dirigible's return. English attention was concentrated on a cricket test match.

In the monkey house, with peanuts on the floor, no monkey would notice the most important arrival, not even Darwin himself. The distance separating the masses from the monkeys is not as great as some, among the masses, imagine.

Last week copper fell to its lowest price in 20 years. This suggestion is offered to copper producers. Offer copper, in thin sheets of various thicknesses, suitable for flashing and other building and repairing purposes. Sell it to farmers, householders and others at the lowest profitable price, and unload your surplus.

Get co-operation from the mail order houses, and hardware stores, and advertise a definite price, 15 cents a pound, if possible, tell how many there are in a pound of thin copper sheetings, and why it is better than tin or galvanized iron.

The copper surplus could be disposed of, if copper men would unite in a really intelligent, persistent, advertising campaign, using extensively the country weeklies, read by farmers, among other mediums.

This column would buy a few thousand pounds of copper sheeting properly priced, to start the sale, and make money on it.

The American Bar Association, to meet 3000 strong in Chicago, this week, will hear from its committee on American citizenship that the farm act, devised to aid farmers, is "the first step to a socialistic government." Is it not a terrible menace to our institutions, our beloved Constitution and our government by corporations, directed by lawyers?

Lawyers discover that the act is not meant "to provide for the general welfare." It is intended to help the farmers.

There are only 20,000,000 of them, so what do they amount to?

When, not long ago, the national government lent tens of millions to one Brooklyn street car concern threatened with bankruptcy, that helped only a handful of stockholders, and some more or less honest promoters of watered stock, and not a bar association committee peeped, or muttered.

That Brooklyn concern, about to sell out to the city of New York, which originally paid for the building of its subways, protests that two hundred and odd millions, offered by the city, is shamefully inadequate.

Nothing like that ever happened to farmers.

Three American senators visiting Russia, were invited to inspect Russia's royal jewels, collected through centuries by the czars. Now owned by the Soviet, worth $250,000,000.

No other nations possess such jewels. The senators and others saw the jewels, lying on the tables, not guarded by any armed men.

Here, our Federal Reserve urges all employers to pay by check, because cash payrolls are never safe. We might learn something about honesty from the "Base Bolsheviks."

In the regular course of business, before the war, one unimportant Russian was put to death, under the knout, by the czar's government, for political offenses.

That Russian's younger brother looked on, and his name was Lenin. The czars are gone. Great St. Petersburg, built by Czar Peter the Great, is now called Leningrad, and the Romanoff jewels belong to Communists that will gradually trade them off for agricultural machinery. A wise trade, although Congo savages and many charming American ladies would not think so.

Whatever your opinion of Bolshevism, you must admire the completeness with which Lenin avenged his brother.

British scientists, 23 years ago, examined the mummy of Pharaoh Menphtah and now Lord Monyihan reveals facts immensely interesting to fundamentalist clergymen. Menphtah seems to have been the Pharoah of the oppression, of whom the Bible says "And the Lord hardened the heart of Pharoah, and he would not let them (the Israelites) go."

Pharoah's body was found drowned, encrusted with common salt, indicating that he was

Hailstorm Does $600,000 Damage

LINK GARRETT IN PROBE OF 'HANDCUFF' SLAYING

STORM RUINS CROPS; LOSS $600,000

Hail Batters Tobacco in the Springfield Area; Lightning Injures Woman in Medford

Following a different course than that of Saturday's cloudburst, a series of freak electrical and hail storms swept western Massachusetts and the suburbs north of Boston today, causing damage estimated at $600,000 and injury to one woman.

Lightning struck in Medford and Everett and in many places in the Connecticut valley, where a terrific fall of hailstones, described as "large as a silver dollar," ruined more than 1000 acres of tobacco.

North of Boston a storm appeared suddenly out of a clear sky and disappeared almost as quickly, evidently moving off to sea. There was a torrential downpour in Medford, Malden, Melrose and Everett and a few flashes of lightning. The disturbance ended in half an hour and the sun again appeared.

WOMAN IS INJURED

Lightning struck the Medford Laundry in Cross st., Medford, and seriously injured Mrs. Ida Faunier, 30, of 53 Wiggleworth st., Somerville, who was at work in the starch room.

She was rendered unconscious and taken to Lawrence Memorial Hospital. No fire followed the flash.

Other employes of the laundry at the charge of the bolt but were not hurt.

The same bolt terrified guests at Medford Kiwanis Club carnival in progress in Mystic ave., nearby, and several hundred persons rushed for shelter into a tent where club members were holding their luncheon.

WRECKS A CHIMNEY

Another bolt hit the home of Harry O'Brien, 8 Hosmer st., Everett, knocking down the chimney. There was no fire and Mrs. O'Brien, who was at home alone, was uninjured.

The greatest damage was done in the western part of the State at South Deerfield, North Hatfield, Whately, Bradstreet and North Hadley.

Tobacco crops to be harvested next week were ruined by the hail which tore the leaves to shreds. The greatest sufferers were Decker Brothers and the American-Sumatra Tobacco Company, both at South Deerfield.

The loss to growers on Saturday's and today's storms was far in excess of $1,000,000.

SLAIN BRIDE'S MATE HUNTED BY RADIO

Warrant at Walpole Charges Jerome Zwicker With Murder

"Arrest and hold Jerome Zwicker for murder."

Wireless crackled today in a search of ships at sea for the missing ship's petty officer while a warrant charging him with the murder of Mrs. Gladys Zwicker, 23, of Norwood, his bride of a year, was issued in Walpole District Court.

More than a dozen messages were broadcast to ships which have cleared New England ports since Friday in the belief that Zwicker may have engaged passage on one of them even before the woman who was found shot to death in the Walpole woods was slain.

That the murder of his bride, a prospective mother, was planned far in advance of their last ride together Friday morning was the belief expressed by state detectives and police in charge of the hunt for Zwicker.

SCENT A RUSE

It was timed, possibly, so that he could embark immediately afterward, they believe, and the abandoning of his automobile at the Savannah line docks in Charlestown Friday or early Saturday gives credence to this theory.

The possibility that this was but a ruse to give the impression he had fled by boat was not being overlooked, however, and Zwicker's description was broadcast throughout New England and New York.

He may have killed himself, for, according to his brother-in-law, Claude Morse, with whom Mrs. Zwicker was living in Stone ctr., Norwood, he had threatened to take her life and commit suicide, but Chief Levi V. Thompson of Walpole pointed out that if he had intended to take his own life he probably would have done so immediately after the murder.

Chief Thompson signed a complaint today charging Zwicker with murder and the warrant was issued by Judge George F. James.

The missing husband was, until last Thursday, quartermaster on the S. S. New York of the Eastern Steamship lines and members of the

BUSINESS BOOM FOR N. E. SEEN BY FIRESTONE

Famous Tire Manufacturer Visits New Service Station in Cambridge

Business has reached its lowest ebb and is definitely on the upward trend, Harvey S. Firestone, famous tire manufacturer, declared today.

He added as a New England manufacturer, with four plants in this section, that New England, through its knowledge and experience, is bound to progress and hold its own hereafter.

The friend of Edison and Ford said that the period of readjustment, the longest the country has ever known, is over and those firms willing to make sacrifices are going ahead.

AT CAMBRIDGE LUNCHEON

The optimistic interview was granted at the new Firestone one-stop service station just opened outside Kendall sq., Cambridgeport, which was visited by Firestone and his family prior to a luncheon by the Cambridge Industrial Association at which he was guest of honor.

The manufacturer explained that since helping to select the brightest boy, a New Englander, as he pointed out, for Thomas A. Edison, he has been at Narragansett Pier, where his sons played polo, and visited his New England factories.

Of these, three are fabric factories and the fourth a rubber shoe manufacturing establishment.

His visit to Cambridge was in honor of the opening of the new service station, which, in addition to selling tires, furnishes practically every service required by motorists.

"STRUCK BOTTOM."

"It is pretty plain," said Mr. Firestone, "that the business depression, the longest this country has ever had, has struck bottom. It was just a business readjustment, which we have in cycles every seven years.

"People get too well satisfied.

Massachusetts has been picked to lead the movement against slander in politics, John E. Swift of Milford, supreme director and former state deputy of the Knights of Columbus, declared today at the business opening of the 48th supreme convention.

Supreme Director Swift said that the campaign, sponsored by Cardinal O'Connell, probably will be waged in Massachusetts on a State scale first and then, if successful, should be presented to the national body in the Fall.

His idea in voicing the suggestion last night far an antislander campaign by the Knights of Columbus, he said was that it should be tried out on a State scale.

Golf and a luncheon in Supreme Knight Martin H. Carmody featured today's opening activities of the convention.

At Wollaston Golf Club the national golf championship (medal play) of the organization was on during the morning hours and the

MAINE DEATH RING SAID TO HARBOR FUGITIVE

Hub and New York Racketeers Hunted in Officer's Murder May Reveal Him

The name of Oliver B. Garrett, fugitive former liquor raider, was linked today with a group of Maine rum racketeers in the Portland investigation of the suspected "handcuff murder" of Patrolman Michael T. Connolly.

Maine county and federal authorities were inquiring into the activities of the racketeers, said to be connected with a Boston and New York liquor ring which has knowledge of the whereabouts of Garrett, who disappeared on the eve of his trial on extortion charges 37 days ago.

This ring, according to information given the authorities, was to have landed a cargo of liquor at Portland last Friday morning near the spot where Patrolman Connolly's body, with wrists manacled by the "bracelets," was found in the water.

POLICE PROBE LOOMS.

Garrett's name was reported to have entered the investigation at a conference between County Attorney Ralph M. Ingalls and U. S. Atty. Frederick R. Dwyer.

As a result of Patrolman Connolly's mysterious death and the rumors naming Garrett and the rum ring, the Portland City Council was to be asked tonight to launch an investigation of the city's police department, Ralph D. Brooks, chairman, said he would file the order.

Brooks said he would seek to have the investigation made by a special committee of five members and reputable private citizens. He will also ask that the council direct the department to round up every suspicious character in Portland, he declared.

The possibility of Garrett being in hiding in Maine has been a forecast one in the minds of local authorities since his disappearance, and only last week, Sergt. Inspector George Augusta and Special Officer William Crowley returned to Boston from an extensive search in that state and the New Brunswick province.

His presence in various parts of Maine has been reported to Dist. Atty. William J. Foley and Boston police in innumerable "tips" that have never been authenticated.

OFFICER'S MURDER THEORY.

A Portland bootlegger has informed Cumberland County investigators that a boat used to have landed liquor Friday near where Patrolman Connolly's body was later found, and two youths who were in an automobile in Ft. Allen park, near the death scene, told police they saw the officer's car being followed by another car.

The theory that the policeman interrupted the landing of the rum cargo, was captured, handcuffed and either hurled or made to walk at gun point to his death off a pier was favored in the probe this afternoon.

Attended by a detail of 40 Portland policemen, the funeral of Connolly was held this morning from the home in Spring st. Rev. Martin T. O'Toole, his nephew, celebrated a solemn high mass of requiem at St. Dominic's church. Burial was in Calvary cemetery.

luncheon followed at the Hotel Westminster roof garden, under auspices of the Catholic Daughters of America.

ATTEND BALL GAME

Attending as guests were supreme officers, supreme directors, state officers and ladies. Afterward many of the delegates attended the ball game at Fenway Park between the Red Sox and Cleveland Indians.

Tonight, in the biggest ritualistic ceremony in the history of fraternalism, more than 2000 officers of 135 councils of Massachusetts will be installed.

The huge joint installation at the Boston Garden will be under the direction of State Deputy Joseph M. Kirby and a staff of State officers.

Preceding the installation, there will be held at the Hotel Westminster a reunion of Knights of Columbus World War veterans, with John E. Riley of Newton, chairman of the committee in charge.

The suggestion for launching of the anti-slander campaign, made by Supreme Director Swift, created a sensation in Knights of Columbus ranks, but gained great momentum today.

Swift, once a candidate for attorney general, in a scathing indictment condemned "the blasphemous weapon of slander, abuse and libel," levelled against candidates, arraigned "whispering campaigns," and stated that real leaders were prevented from entering the public service by "mud-slingers."

The proposed league to end slander would have branches in every local Knights of Columbus council, Swift said, and would be the means of putting into high public office men of excellent qualifications who now shun the "mud-slinging" of political campaigns.

SWIFT URGES ACTION

"Since we are celebrating the founding of Boston and the Massachusetts Bay Colony, the Knights of Columbus must assume the responsibilities of government just as the founders of the Colonies ordered did in another time." Supreme Director Swift stated.

"Sinners we claim that our members do not get the recognition their numbers, influence and brain power entitles them to.

"Just as Massachusetts had the courage and initiative to take the lead in establishing this government, let Massachusetts again take the leadership by smoothing the way for more leadership in country, state, city and town.

"Let us form a league against defamation of men aspiring to public office and make every council a chapter in that league.

"Let the Knights of Columbus say to the world that a man may run for public office without being subjected to the deadly weapon of slander.

GOOD MEN KEPT DOWN

"We have no greater leader in the country, our order has no better friend than Cardinal O'Connell, and he sponsors such a program.

"Leaders hesitate to go before the electorate, no matter how pure their private life, or how much they can contribute to the public service, to run the gauntlet of abuse and slander to which they become subjected.

"Fear of the whispering campaign of a foe, and that unto the seventh generation, have kept good men out of public service."

Just prior to this meeting, unemployment was branded as a grave peril by Mayor Curley, speaking over a national radio hookup, on which Supreme Knight Michael J. Carmody and Governor Frank G. Allen also were speakers.

The morning was given over to reception and registration of delegates, the first to register being Theodore A. Aanstoos, P. D., of Christobel Council 1680, Canal Zone. He was accompanied by his wife and son.

CUBA AFTER CONVENTION

A Second was Charles W. McGannon, attorney at law, State Deputy Carlos E. Finlay of Jesus Council, 2503, Trinidad, Cuba. He brought with him an invitation from the Cuban government to hold the convention next year in Havana. This invitation, he said, would be confirmed by cable today by Gen. Gerardo Machado, President of the Republic of Cuba.

McGannon said the Cuban government had agreed to turn over Capital Hall in Havana to the delegates if necessary.

The reception committee, headed by Peter W. Collins, has groups at each railroad station, steamship landing and the airport to welcome arriving delegates and escort them to the Hotel Statler in automobiles.

John H. Reddin of Denver, Col., supreme master of the fourth degree; Dr. Timothy Hanrahan, vice supreme master of the fourth degree in charge of Cabot Province, which takes in all New England, and Louis B. Watson, master of the fourth degree in Massachusetts, were in charge.

GUESTS AT BANQUET

Congressman John W. McCormick, Dist. Atty. William F. Foley, former Mayor Edward M. Larkin of Medford, Charles W. McGannon of Trinidad, Cuba, State Deputy of Cuba; John Higgins, State Deputy of Newfoundland, and Attorney Edward J. McLaughlin, Jr., were among the candidates.

Following the degree, the supreme officers and directors were the guests of the 10,000 fourth degree members at a banquet under the auspices of the Cabot Province.

Urging the fourth degree members to fight "seditious and alluring doctrines systematically circulated throughout the land which will bring about the destruction of our government," Louis B. Watson, presiding, assailed Socialism, Communism and Bolshevism and stated it was a duty of the order to "ferret out dissemenators of such doctrines whether they worked in the open or in secret."

State Chaplain Rev. Joseph I. Coppinger, I. P. P., pastor of St. Augustine's Church, South Boston, welcomed the members to Boston and Massachusetts.

FATHER AHERN SPEAKS

Rev. Michael J. Ahern, S. J., director of the Catholic Truth radio hour, lauded the order and announced that he would go on the air in a national hookup a week from next Sunday, speaking on "St Ignatius."

Picturing the two greatest events in the history of the world as the "Birth of Christ and the American Revolution," John H. Reddin of Denver, Col., supreme master of the fourth degree, stated "the American Revolution was the greatest struggle to establish the simple and fundamental principle that all civil power resides in the people."

He stated the Puritans or Pilgrim did not discover that principle, but their descendants did.

"We have heard much talk of the mild mannered Pilgrims and the stern minded Puritans, with the observance of the Tercentenary here. They are entitled to many things. But there was a group of Catholics, sent here from Spain and France, 80 years before the Puritans, who deserve honor, too," he said. He stated he meant the Franciscan friars and the Jesuits.

"We do not minimize the deeds of the Puritans or Pilgrims or their descendants. We of the Knights of Columbus say all honor to the great statesmen, jurists and scholars the Commonwealth of Massachusetts has produced.

LESSON IN AMERICANISM

"But in giving that honor do not forget the trail blazers of faith who came here, suffered and died only 50 years after Columbus discovered America, 80 years before the Pilgrims and the Puritans, when the Atlantic coastland was nothing but a wilderness.

Congressman McCormack, speaking for the class of candidates received into the fourth degree, stated that the order taught a lesson of Americanism, tolerance, and citizenship, that no other order in the land could better.

The nationwide broadcast from Station WNAC, over the Columbia Broadcasting System, was arranged through the courtesy of John Shepard III.

The Massachusetts Knights of Columbus Choral Society, directed by Joseph Ecker, and the Convention orchestra, directed by Charles Hector, furnished a varied musical program.

POLICE PROBE DEATH OF RICH PACKER'S SON

Try to Determine How Swift Got Pistol With Which He Shot Himself

New York, Aug. 18 (AP)—Police were trying today to determine how and where William E. Swift, son of Louis F. Swift, Chicago packer, obtained the pistol with which he ended his life in a Park ave. sanitarium Saturday night.

Dr. Thomas A. Gonzales, deputy chief medical examiner, sought to learn whether Swift had taken narcotics or liquor.

Mrs. Helen Morton Bayley Swift, the widow, is in Johns Hopkins hospital, Baltimore. Hospital officials said they would make efforts to keep news of the suicide from reaching her.

Mrs. Swift is the former Helen Morton, daughter of Mark Morton, the salt magnate. She is the mother of a five-year-old son. Her first husband was Roger Bayley. Swift was 35 years old.

Detectives said Swift had been permitted to roam about the sanitarium at will and to leave it for long periods.

Dr. Gonzales said Swift easily could have got the weapon in New Jersey or by mail order.

BRUIN DEMANDS M'GLUE QUIT

Declaring that Charles H. McGlue of Cambridge, has not been a resident of Middlesex County long enough to cast a vote for the office he seeks, Atty. James J. Bruin of Lowell today asked McGlue to withdraw as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for district attorney for Middlesex County.

"Newspaper reports disclose that you and I have both filed papers for the Democratic nomination for district attorney at Middlesex County, a district which you recently moved into, and it seems too bad to have a primary contest this year when the chances of Democratic victory are especially bright," Bruin said in a letter to McGlue.

"I believe that this primary nomination should be given to some candidate who is not open to attack such as you are on the ground that you have moved into the county within the past year or two.

"I have been a lifelong resident of Middlesex county and a lifelong member of the Democratic party, and I believe you would withdraw as a candidate for the Democratic nomination because of your short residence in this county."

Bruin's letter concluded with a statement that McGlue will be unable to answer the argument of the Republican opposition that "you have not been a resident of Middlesex County long enough to have cast a vote for the office which you now seek."

ENDURANCERS MAKE $39,000

St. Louis, Aug. 18 (AP)—Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine were back to earth today after completing the longest sustained flight in history, 647 hours, 28½ minutes. Conflicting versions of what brought the sturdy monoplane, Greater St. Louis, back to ground were given by the fliers and their manager.

The pilots said they landed because of a break in the crankcase of the motor. William Pickens, their manager, said they came down because of lack of financial returns.

Cost of the flight, exclusive of investment in planes and equipment, was about $1,000 a week.

The separation ends a romance which started when both were struggling for fame in the motion picture world. Mrs. Beery was formerly Mary Gillman, Virginia beauty and film star. The couple were married Aug. 4, 1924.

Springfield, Vt., Aug. 18—Baffled at every turn, state investigators today relegated to the dusty shelves of unsolved mysteries the chloroform "suicide" of a girl buried a year ago in a potter's field at Chester.

Mrs. Catherine Potter, 22, who reappeared after a 14 months' disappearance to confute her husband's claim that she was the victim and to face his new bride, was in a state of collapse at the local jail as active investigation of the mystery, resumed after her "return from the grave," was ended.

The long strain of being submitted to questioning for several days caused her to break down and a physician was called to attend her, but she is not seriously affected.

With Robert J. "Romeo" King, Harrison Smith and Mrs. Gladys H. Walbridge, she is awaiting trial at the September sitting of court on statutory charges preferred so they could be held while investigation of the mystery is underway.

State Detective Edwin C. Brown said he was not satisfied that the suicide note found on the body of the girl victim was not written by Mrs. Packard, one to Mrs. Packard sure. He still feels, he said, that she could aid in establishment of the buried girl's identity if she wished to do so, but he has exhausted every means to get that aid.

He is without further clues, he said—that which yesterday pointed to the victim being a Laconia, N. H., girl having failed—and the case will be listed as the suicide of an unidentified person until such time, if ever, as conclusive evidence of murder is obtained. In his own opinion the case is one of foul play.

Waltham Girl Hitch-Hikes 1500 Miles on Vacation

For exercise, sunshine and fresh air nothing can beat hitch-hiking, in the opinion of Edith Swanson of 106 Prentice st., Waltham.

She has just returned from a hitch-hiking tour of nearly 1000 miles through New England, adding this record to the one she set two years ago, when she took a 1500-mile trip in the same manner to Michigan and back.

Miss Swanson, who is a bookkeeper, spent her vacation of two weeks on the hitch-hiking tour through Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. She kept a daily record of the number of miles traveled, and estimates that she walked about eight miles a day. She received 52 limts from autoists.

Edison to Return to Work After Slight Illness

West Orange, N. J., Aug. 18—Thomas A. Edison has entirely recovered from the slight cold which confined him to his home for the last week and will return to work at his laboratories today, it was announced at the inventor's home here.

Thomas A. Edison

The 84-year-old inventor, on the advice of physicians, would not risk the return of pneumonia and confined himself to his Llewyn Park home. Edison's attack recalled an attack of pneumonia suffered a year ago which placed him under the care of several specialists.

The statement revealed when his wife made a hurried trip from Chautauqua, N. Y., where she received a diploma from the Chautauqua Library and Scientific Circle, a movement instituted 32 years ago by her father, Lewis Miller, and Bishop John H. Vincent.

Firestone Lauds Lad's Edison Test Honesty

Harvey S. Firestone, tire manufacturer, visiting in Cambridge today revealed that he gave 100 per cent in the Thomas A. Edison "brightest boy" contest to a youth who answered the "desert" question by saying that he would save himself, his sweetheart and a guide.

"The boy was honest," said the famous manufacturer, "and I gave him 100 per cent for honesty.

"I don't know that any agreement could be reached on that question. Of course the theory was that the best selection was that which would be of the most practical help to the country."

"The 'brightest boy,' by the way, was a New Englander, and he is bright."

Firestone was one of the judges in the contest, in which boys from 48 states took part, the winner to be educated by Edison.

"With Mr. Ford and the other judges," he said, "I sat from 8 o'clock in the afternoon until 4:30 in the morning reading their replies.

"The answers were graded by groups, the first questions being chemical and technical, the second general and the third psychological."

They think everything is going to go along in the same way, and become selfish, demanding too much. Prosperity is hard to handle. People get so they are easily dissatisfied, and don't want to work.

"After a time we find that conditions are not quite so good. Then business starts on the downward path, and people commence to doubt. They lose confidence and draw back, and as business continues to go down they become afraid, and nobody does anything.

N. E. WELL PREPARED.

"After a while they decide that things are better, business begins to go up and people begin to regain their hope and confidence. Then we get prosperity back again.

"So far as I can see there is plenty of opportunity now and the company that goes forward is the company that is going to be successful. Firms must take sacrifices and adjust themselves to changed conditions. Rubber, cotton and all commodities that go into fine manufacturing have gone to the bottom. The Firestone company adjusted itself and today our factories are running 24 hours a day six days a week to fill orders.

"New England was better prepared, with a better foundation for the readjustment period and suffered less than other communities.

TOO MANY SELF-SATISFIED

"You have had your readjustment, particularly in manufacturing, for the last five or ten years. One of the things which prevents men and companies and communities and countries from going ahead is self-satisfaction. They get swelled up with their own importance.

"I don't know if this condition applies to all business affected by the depression in New England of a few years ago, but it had a part in cotton manufacturing.

"You thought you had it all and always would have. Then the South came along and did a better job. Business men and labor and political organizations got too well satisfied with their own importance.

"As a result your cotton business was largely taken away, and many tire manufacturers went South to build fabric mills.

NEW "MACHINE AGE"

"I felt a little differently about it. I believe that wherever you have knowledge and experience, if it is properly directed, it can be made to produce more. Therefore, while figures showed that we stood to lose from 2 to 4 cents a pound in manufacturing fabrics up here in New England compared with the South, we thought a change would be an economic mistake.

"We came here and bought three fabric mills and put in the latest machinery and equipment. Today I think we are manufacturing as cheap or cheaper than they are in the South. Of course, machinery has eliminated men, but this is the machine age, and frankly I don't know what it is coming to.

"With its knowledge and experience New England is bound to progress and you will hold your own, not permitting any part of the country to go ahead of it from now on. Your attitude and your conditions are different. You are going to work.

"I am always glad to come to New England. One of our first three branches was opened here. I not only like and believe in New England, but have demonstrated it with a boot and shoe factory and three fabric factories."

Mr. Firestone said he believed the price of rubber had reached its lowest, but felt it never would attain a very high price again. With Liberia and the experiments of Thomas A. Edison, he said this country is independent of others.

'RED' SUSPECT ARRESTED HERE

With letters addressed to President Hoover, Gov. Frank G. Allen, State President Gaspar G. Bacon and other notables, a "Red" suspect, giving the name of Thomas Rossi of New York, was arrested today in the Back Bay after a long hunt by Capt. John F. Nowell of the Wolf Secret Service Bureau.

Pending report on his photograph from New York, Washington, Chicago and other cities, he was arraigned in Roxbury court for alleged defacing of a hotel and was held in $5000 until Aug. 26.

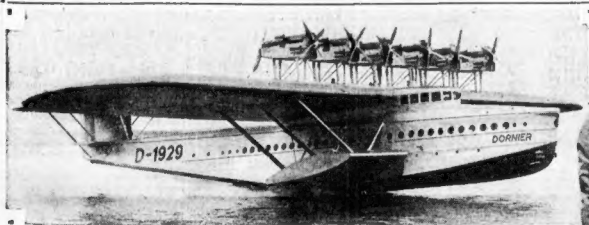
Taken to Back Bay police station and searched after his arrest, the letters, signed by himself, and a pass to the Boston Navy Yard, were found on Rossi.

The letters were in criticism of the government and demanded changes.

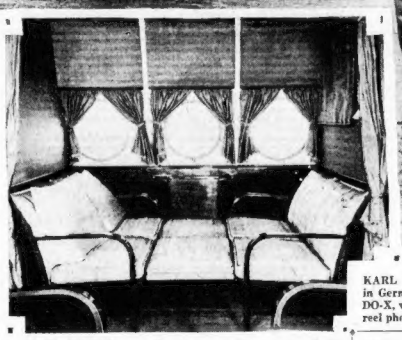
He is alleged to have defrauded several hotels in Boston and Chicago, but claims to be from Louisiana.

MATSON LINER SAVES 317 JUST AS SHIP SINKS IN THE PACIFIC

"A Flying Whale" With Luxury of Liner Coming to America



THE GIANT DO-X, the world's largest seaplane, is being groomed for a flight to the United States, after having American motors installed, which have proved superior to those formerly used. The huge plane, which looks like a flying liner, is lavishly equipped.



A COMPARTMENT on the great seaplane was photographed as it appeared in Altenrheim, Switzerland. This sleeping equipment is of the very latest.

'AMERICAN' BAR ON BIG PLANE

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
Universal Service Special Cable

Friedrichshafen, Aug. 18—The Dornier 12-engined DOX will be the first aircraft of any type to cross the Atlantic equipped with an "American bar."

Just why all bars in Europe are "American bars," when supposedly no bars exist in America, has never been explained.

In reference to the "American bar" Capt. Christiansen, who will command the flight, today said:

"We will have an American bar but it won't do the Americans much good, for there are two or three in the crew and the first order I'll give when I take over the ship will be 'no drinking on duty.' Three passengers, one a German, one an American, and the other an Englishman, will have the exclusive use of the bar."

SAYS CAROL TO WED LUPESCU

Vienna, Aug. 18 (AP)—Rumanians in Vienna said today they understood King Carol, if he fails at recognition with his wife, Queen Helen, plans a Morganatic marriage with Mme. Magda Lupescu, for whom he once renounced his throne.

Their information was based upon the word of a foreign diplomat who recently passed through Vienna from Bucharest.

Queen Helen, he asserted, would be too proud, not to say religious, to be contented to lead a merely shadowy existence as Queen while a rival held the affections of the king.

Carol, he said, is temporizing in the matter of coronation and brought about its postponement from Oct. 15 to next spring, because he has his misgivings as to how the nation, and especially the army, will take the news that he is planning a marriage with Mme. Lupescu.

Pup's Bark Reveals Norwood Slaying

AN AUTOMOBILE ride ended in the fatal shooting of Mrs. Jerome Zwicker of Norwood, whose body was found in a field in Walpole. Police are conducting a radio search for her missing husband.

JEROME ZWICKER, the husband, is believed to have boarded a steamer and gone South. He was a quartermaster on a boat plying out of Boston until a few days ago. (Other pictures on page 3.)

CHIEF OF POLICE LEVI V. THOMPSON of Walpole is shown with Mrs. Zwicker's aggrieved pet, Teddy, which could not be lured from the side of the body until it was removed.

Dog Guards Body of Slain Mistress

A little white Spitz puppy on guard!

On guard in the woods of Walpole over the body of its dead mistress, two days and two nights and part of a third day, wailing in grief, barking in fury, snuggling in the rain against the still form beneath the wet leaves, whimpering.

Written into the records of the murder of Mrs. Gladys Zwicker, young bride and prospective mother, is a new story of dumb animal courage and affection, the story of the dog, Teddy, which not only witnessed the killing of its mistress, but remained with her hidden body, without food or water, until its plaintive barks disclosed the crime.

DOG SHARES SECRET

But for the little pup, the body of Mrs. Zwicker might not have been found for months and her disappearance might possibly have remained an unsolved mystery.

Teddy went on the last ride with Mrs. Zwicker and her slayer Friday morning from the Norwood home. He went everywhere with his mistress, and why he escaped her fate is a puzzle to the police.

What really happened on that ride only the tiny Spitz and one person knows. Where the murder took place, why and how the body was hidden, Teddy is trying to tell the police with his puppy bark and his black eyes. But it is no go—they just don't understand a dog.

ON GUARD NIGHT AND DAY

When the body of the woman was carried into the woods, Teddy went along, too, snapping his puppy snaps, no doubt, at the heels of the person who carried her.

And when she was left there alone beneath the undergrowth she was not exactly alone for the dog was there, on patrol, on guard.

It rained some Friday night and it was cold. On Saturday there was a heavy storm and it was cold. Through the days and the long black nights beside the lifeless form of the only person it ever had loved, the puppy stayed, snuggling close, whimpering, barking for someone to come and find them.

And at last someone did, or the dog would have remained until he, too, died.

How much finer than many humans is a dog.

Spiritual Healing Studied by Bishops

London, Aug. 18 (US)—For the first time spiritual healing has been discussed by the Lambeth conference of Anglican bishops, but the result has not been disclosed. Skepticism, however, is felt throughout Christian Science circles in London as to whether there will be any move on the part of the ecclesiastics toward the various faith healing movements.

"It is too much to hope that the bishops will cast off their medieval orthodoxy," said Fred Backaus, one of the chief officials of the Christian Science parent church in London.

TAHITI GOES DOWN NEAR ISLANDS

Boat Drifts Helpless for Days Before Help Arrives in Nick of Time

Wellington, New Zealand, Aug. 18—The Matson liner Ventura has wirelessed that all passengers, officers, and crew of the British steamer Tahiti, which sank today off Rarotonga, Cook Islands, are safe. The total number of persons rescued is 317.

The Ventura is proceeding to Pago Pago, where the Tahiti's island passengers and crew will be disembarked. The Ventura then will proceed to San Francisco, where American and European passengers will be landed.

The Tahiti had been near foundering since Saturday and since Thursday, when she lost her starboard propeller and tailshaft had been drifting helplessly in the trough of the ocean.

ARRIVED JUST IN TIME

The Ventura was none too soon. Radio advices declared that the American liner hove to just as a third bulkhead on the Tahiti gave way and the liner began to develop a heavy list to port.

The Tahiti's passengers gathered together what few belongings they could rescue in the few minutes allowed them and tumbled into the ship's boats. After they had all been seen safely aboard the rescue ship, members of the crew were taken off.

The Norwegian freighter Penyhryn and the American liner Ventura are still standing by and an effort is being made to salvage mails carried by the Tahiti and the more valuable of the passengers' baggage.

HUB WOMAN ABOARD

FIND BODIES OF 3 IN LAUNCH

New York, Aug. 18 (AP)—The coast guard received a report from patrol boat 213 today that while cruising between Northport and Port Washington in Long Island Sound the patrol boat sighted a small open launch containing the bodies of two young women and a man. The boat was swamped and almost submerged. The coast guard patrol said it was towing the launch to Northport.

The launch K17581 bore the name "And How."

The only launch of that name which coast guard men were able to trace immediately is owned by Victor A. Bell of New York, who said his boat was in the yards at City Island.

CHARGE BRIDE'S DEATH TO MATE

crew of that ship were questioned upon arrival here today in an effort to learn whether Zwicker had ever spoken to them of his wife.

AUTOPSY TODAY

According to Morse and his wife, Zwicker's sister, Zwicker and his wife had agreed to part, and Saturday was the day set for him to go to the Norwood home and remove his belongings. The fact that he arrived a day ahead of schedule is one indication that the murder was planned in advance, the authorities assert.

The body of his auburn-haired bride, which was guarded in its woods hiding place for two and one-half days by the spitz puppy Mrs. Zwicker had bought six months ago, was removed to Boston today, and Dr. Geor B. Magrath, northern medical examiner, will perform the autopsy.

The only mark on the body, so far as could be learned, is the bullet hole behind the left ear, made from a gun fired at such close range that the scalp and skin of the neck were burned by powder.

A 22-caliber revolver, which Morse reported as taken from his trunk when he told the police about the couple's disappearance Friday night, is believed to have been the murder weapon. The gun was not found with the body nor was it in the bloodstained car which was towed yesterday to Norwood and was under examination even when a youth found the body.

Yesterday afternoon Oliver Yeaton, 18, of 126 Common st., Walpole, heard the barking of a dog in the woods near the Stone st. extension, Walpole. Following the barks of the dog, he came on the fully clothed body of Mrs. Zwicker in the underbrush. He raced to the road and hailed a passing automobile.

BLOODSTAINS IN AUTO

He directed the motorist to the Walpole police station and told Chief Levi Vernon Thompson of his find.

When the chief and Patrolman Michael Fitzgibbons arrived at the scene the body was recognized as that of Mrs. Zwicker from a description broadcast by Norwood police Saturday.

Chief William Sullivan of Norwood was notified and Dr. E. H. Ewing, associate medical examiner, was called. Chief Sullivan had just finished an examination of the Zwicker automobile, having discovered evidence of a struggle and blood stains in the rear seat.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Edmund R. Dewing and State Detective Michael Fleming arrived on the scene within an hour to direct the investigation of the case.

Her Spitz puppy was inconsolable yesterday. At first he snapped at policemen trying to move the body.

William Copeland, another brother-in-law of the woman, assisted in positively identifying her.

The young couple were childhood sweethearts in Grand Manan, Me., an island in the Bay of Fundy. Shortly after their marriage about a year ago they moved to Norwood.

Other than a few brief statements to police, Mrs. Morse, the slain woman's sister, was too heartbroken to discuss the case.

Neighbors told police Zwicker arrived at the Morse home Friday morning, and that shortly afterward he and his bride left in the automobile with the dog. Mrs. Zwicker wore only a light dress and neither coat nor hat, which caused suspicion that foul play had occurred when she did not return that night.

Dog Proved Ownership of Master's Coat

Editor Boston American:

Here is an incident about a dog which might be interesting to your readers.

A young man on a very hot day left his coat in the rack of a passenger car. After prolonged conversation on a proposition with a man, representing a large business concern, he discovered at his close that he had left his coat in the car.

He wired his father to get his coat from the railroad lost and found department.

Accompanied by his son's dog, the father went to parcel office and identified the coat, but the attendant wanted more evidence that the coat belonged to his son.

The dog suddenly got a smell of the coat near by, began barking and jumping around. This evidence was conclusive. The attendant considered the dog had proven the ownership and delivered to the father his son's coat. N. M. MELLON.

Declares War on Evils of Whiskey

Editor Boston American:

I have read a few letters in your letter column about prohibition. It is a hackneyed subject. I have no argument for or against prohibition, but what I am against is WHISKEY.

There is room for debate on this prohibition question, but there is no room for debate on the whiskey question. Knock whiskey and I'm with you.

Praises Salem Woman for Painting House

Editor Boston American:

All honor to Mrs. W. M. Swasey of Salem, depicted in your paper in the very act of pushing a paint brush!

When women progress so far as to remove paint from their faces and daub it on the clapboards of their houses, there is a new surprise for the men.

Women like to paint, Jezebel of Bible fame started this racket of painting faces. It has been going ever since and seems to be at its height along Tremont st., Boston, any fine afternoon this summer.

But now it has got a detour. Women are on ladders, wielding with deft hand the paint brush that is mightier than the rolling pin. Women on that ladder, be careful! Don't fall, for mercy sake! SAM BEATTY.

Officers at South Station Called Stars

Editor Boston American:

Assigning police officers to right positions on the force referred to in your paper about a week ago, touches a vital point, in getting the best out of men.

For instance, those traffic officers every morning at the South Station are sto a in that capacity. They are well seasoned and know how to direct and manage traffic at this point. If it were not for their good judgment, accidents would mark this spot of travel.

Take that traffic officer in the box. I do not know who he is, never spoke a word to him, but when that hand cuts the air to stop traffic it means something. It is a long hand like the hand of the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor, and constantly reminds me of it. Here are officers well assigned. Police Commissioner Hultman is on the right track to give his men assignments where they are most fitted to serve.

JEREMIAH N. NASON.

Thanks American for Taxicab Editorial

Editor Boston American:

Thank you very much for your editorial on Aug. 4, about the independent taxicab drivers. You surely hit the nail on the head when you draw the attention of your readers to the handicaps that now burden these hard-working men. And when I say "hard-working" I mean it.

I know, because my husband is one of them and he "brings home the bacon" with a taxicab. He is out every morning at 9 o'clock and doesn't quit until 2 or 3 o'clock the following morning. It is no cinch driving a car all those hours, with nerves alert and taut for the safety of passengers and pedestrians in our present day motor traffic. He makes much less money than the average nine-hour-a-day workman.

Almost all of his co-workers are either young men who are trying to earn enough to get married and establish a home, or they are married men who have to keep up a home for their families. It takes plenty of money to accomplish either and keep the wolf from the door.

Have these men ever been given a "break" when it comes to the taxi stand problem? So far, they haven't. Who has the best stands? The independents?

Please take a look at the busiest stands, namely, the hotels and stations, and your own eyes will convince you if I can't.

Why are these men being made the "goats" in this new traffic problem? Because, the other taxi companies are operated with hired drivers in machines owned by the companies. The companies are more powerful, influential, and they "protect" their drivers against such annoyances.

These companies are trying to wipe out the independent men. But will they succeed? I know they will not, because these men will fight for their right: the right to make a decent living for their dear ones.

Your editorial on this vital question was read by countless thousands of red-blooded men and women of Boston, who, if properly roused, will aid these men in their fight. And, Mr. Editor, with help through you and the Boston Evening American, I am positive of their success. SALLY.

Taft, Lincoln Nominated in Different Buildings

Editor Boston American:

It was stated in a Boston paper that former President William H. Taft was nominated in the Coliseum, Chicago, the historic spot that nominated Lincoln in 1860.

This is an error. Lincoln was nominated in the Wigwam—torn down soon afterwards—not in the Coliseum. N. M. K. HELMS.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor Boston American:

The prolonged unemployment situation has brought untold hardship to many people. There have been sporadic signs of recovery as business in general has touched the bottom. But further stimulus is urgently needed to hasten the return of prosperity.

The editorial opinion on the extension of Federal Reserve credit for unemployment relief provides the key to its immediate solution. Thus, small manufacturers could secure loans for production purposes from their banks at low interest rates with finished products as collateral.

When business emerges from depression toward prosperity, let us take important precautions against avoidable mistakes. Here are some simple suggestions. 1. The able and willing workers should be given steady positions at high wages, working short hours under wholesome conditions. 2. The capable and farsighted employers should manufacture goods on an even schedule of monthly production, based on careful market analysis and sales forecasting. 3. The wise and sensible consumers should budget their income to meet expenses with ample allowance for systematic saving for protection and investment.

At this moment the financial leaders should bear the first burden of pushing the Wheel of Prosperity. But it is the duty of business executives to watch every step in the management of their firms in order to keep that same wheel always running smoothly. The bitter experience of a business depression is a costly lesson to all. It is the time to make money with careful thinking and avoid the idea of "getting rich quick" without working. WILLIAM L. SHEN.

SAYS PAPERS 'MADE' RADIO

Toronto, Aug. 18 (AP)—The debt of radio broadcasting to the newspaper "is beyond all computation," Dr. Lee De Forest, pioneer inventor, told the annual convention of the Institute of Radio Engineers here today.

Decrying what he described as "the use of broadcast for direct and blatant advertising," Dr. De Forest, delivering his address as president of the institute, stressed the part the daily press had played in popularizing broadcasting.

"Radio's debt to the newspaper for daily program notices, program reviews and for the generous radio sections is beyond all computation," he said. "Unquestionably it was this astonishing interest on the part of the press in broadcasting during its early, struggling 10 years which alone enabled it to survive those crucial years until an awakened popular interest made radio selfs.pporting. I sincerely feel that the debt will be partially repaid only when certain forms of advertising most obviously ill-suited for radio's medium go to the print'ed sheet."

Portales, N. M., Aug. 18 (AP)—Mrs. D. C. Morn and three of her five children died in a blaze which destroyed their farm home near here today.

"Lucky Girl" Had Everything But the Love of the Man She Really Wanted

Instruction for young men and women in the proper use of their hearts and the fundamentals of sex was advocated by Dr. Alfred Worcester, professor in the Harvard College department of hygiene, at a re-er' luncheon of the Girls Friendly Society in Boston.

Dr. Worcester declared that because of economic conditions, the mating instinct in modern young men and women is suppressed until the late twenties instead of being satisfied when they are young, and said that from this much harm results. He urged early marriages, saying that through failure to marry many healthy young people become nervous wrecks.

Summing up, he said:

"Girls learn to like men through first loving one; boys on the other hand learn to love one through liking many. This difference is fundamental, and by keeping it in mind much that seems mysterious to lovers would be readily understood.'

"So long as it is considered immodest for a girl to admit any longing for a sweetheart, she is practically obliged to stifle her best self.

"The success of conscientious girls in such concealment leads their boy friend to believe that only girls of a lower class can be responsive to their advances."

Cathie Paige, 19-year-old heroine of Hazel Livingston's great serial, "Lucky Girl," learned the truth of Dr. Worcester's wisdom too late.

She was young enough when she married for even the Harvard sage to approve—but she didn't know that she lost the only man she really loved simply because she didn't know him her true feelings.

They called her "Lucky Girl" because she had everything that money could buy. Yet her heart was hungry for the one man in the world she loved. And that man was not her husband.

Don't miss "Lucky Girl," the absorbing story of a typical modern girl whom Fate mocked while the world envied. Watch for this greatest of all Livingston stories in the Boston Evening American beginning Wednesday.

Discovers Females Stand Heat Better Than Males

Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y., Aug. 18 (AP)—Discovery that the feminine body stands high temperature better than the male has been made at Carnegie Institution.

The finding is said by its author, Dr. Oscar Riddle, to be an important part of the processes of natura that determine sex.

He finds that high temperature slows down male metabolism more than female. Metabolism is the production of energy.

Ordinarily from youth to old age male metabolism produces more energy than female, so the Carnegie discovery means that the male loses his margin of energy superiority when the temperature goes too high.

It was disclosed in five years' experimenting with ring doves and pigeons, but Dr. Riddle quotes experiments of several other scientists to show that it probably applies also to humans.

THESE "Humorads" won a daily prize of two tickets each to the R. K. O. Keith Theatre to see Joe Cook's all-talking Columbia picture, "Rain or Shine," appearing there this week. These, and all the other daily winners of theatre tickets, will be entered for the final selection of the cash prize awards. These will be announced on Wednesday, Aug. 20, in the Boston Evening American.

See miles away with these powerful Binoculars!

A proud owner of these binoculars will be long remembered as one of those courageous pioneers who succeeded in surmounting bill-boards and taking a peek at real America. In hunting beasts of irritable dispositions these binoculars are absolutely priceless; for with them you can get a close view of the game and still have a fair start to beat the animal to safety. These binoculars will also give excellent service to those who take pleasure in seeing manhood in flower galloping over the untilled field in a mad chase after the modern Holy Grail, an inflated pigskin; or in breathlessly scrutinizing a few horse-tails sticking out of a cloud of dust gently wafted around an open track; and many other curious and diverting sights which too great a risk of our person or pocketbook make it imprudent to see at close range.

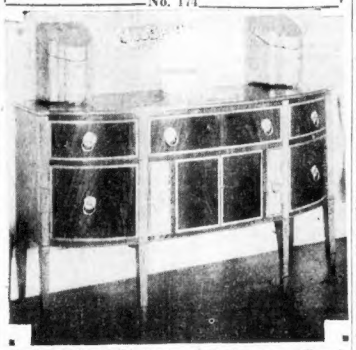
DAILY ANTIQUE

No. 174



Furniture of the Colonists was very often made of several kinds of wood. During the 18th century, particularly, inlay was widely used, especially at the period when Hepplewhite and Sheraton were setting the styles for our cabinet makers. This mahogany and satinwood sideboard of Hepplewhite style is exhibited in the Lucy Derby Fuller room at the Museum of Fine Arts. On the top of the sideboard are two satinwood knife boxes, corresponding with the inlaid areas of the mahogany piece. This sideboard was given to the museum by S. Richard Fuller in memory of his wife, Lucy Derby Fuller, a descendant of one of Salem's most prosperous merchants and ships owners.

Boston Evening American is publishing daily photographs of interesting antiques. Owners of antiques of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. If a photograph is not available, the American will send a cameraman to photograph the antique, providing the owner lives in Greater Boston. Address the Antique Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, Mass.

JOE COOK IN 'RAIN OR SHINE,' PROVES A MIRTHQUAKE AT B. F. KEITH'S

NOTED FUN TRIO AT BEST

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"RAIN OR SHINE" by any other name would be as amusing. But if the title doesn't count, certain names in the cast do. For Joe Cook, Dave Chasen and Tom Howard are probably the most absurdly laughable trio the talking screen has had; and if you don't believe it, hurry right into the New B. F. Keith's house, and be shown.

* * *

THESE ARE MERRY maniacs, these three chaps. They are fine in the musical show of the same name on stage several seasons back, but it does look as if, for some reason or other, they're even more lunatics in the film version. But really comparisons are not the thing; the fact remains that "Rain or Shine" will chase the blues and keep them chastely at a distance from you. There's a story woven in, but even that doesn't matter a great deal. Nothing seems to matter, save that Messrs. Cook, Chasen and Howard are about the funniest of funny men.

Joe Cook

* * *

COOK IS KNOWN as the one-man show. He can be all that, for he is amazingly versatile and clever. Yet he shares his honors in the picture with his two pals. They're good, too. If Cook be the best, it doesn't follow the others must be far behind. Cook tells some of his famous stories —the one about the ——fla——. The farm in Texas. He will even imitate the four Hawaiians. Don't say, or do, anything. He is just plainly comic; and his comedy is contagious.

* * *

THE DRY DROLL Howard is also curiously merry in his peculiar way. His patter comes through superbly. He's a corker. Chasen is better even than he was on stage; he's a dandy. These three, Cook and Chasen and Howard, are the show. Folk in the cast, like Louise Fazenda, for instance, seem lost in the shuffle, and that is saying a lot about Miss Fazenda. Not often has she been submerged; she usually stands out. The same fate befalls the sweet Joan Peers, and likewise William Collier, Jr.

* * *

"RAIN OR SHINE" is a mirthquake. Director Frank Capra, supervising the making of the picture for Columbia, knew his actors; and so he permits Cook and Howard and Chasen to run around all over the lot. And the result is a triumph for pure fun's sake.

BEBE DANIELS HEADS 'EX-MISTRESS' CAST

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

Copyright 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Aug. 18—Someone in the Warner organization had an eye to the box office when they offered to star Bebe Daniels in "Ex-Mistress." How the fans will enjoy seeing Bebe and Ben Lyon playing together the first time since their marriage two months ago. It was just a lucky break that enabled Bebe to accept Darryl Zanuck's offer to play the leading role in this drama, which features her bridegroom, and Lewis Stone.

"Reaching for the Moon," co-starring Douglas Fairbanks and Bebe, has been postponed for four weeks—and since R. K. O. had no picture ready for her Warners were able to borrow her. "Ex Mistress" is set as one of the specials on the Warner Brothers' program. Perhaps Warners are spurred on in their hope that this will be a big time booster at the box office by "The Divorcee," adapted from "Ex-Wife." "The Divorcee" did more for Norma Shearer than any picture ever made. It has made history in every theatre in which it has been shown throughout the country.

"The Louella O. Parsons"

WITH PATHE BUYING this story for Ann Harding and that one for Constance Bennett and giving Gloria Swanson anything she wants it is interesting to know that Helen Twelvetrees is not forgotten. Little Twelvetrees is perhaps not as well established as the other three but some of our eminent judges of beauty and talent advise us to keep our eye on her and see what happens. Her next picture for Pathe is "Cross Your Fingers." It will be directed by Joseph Santley, well known stage actor. The Santleys, Ivy Sawyer and Joseph, have become a conservative part of Hollywood social life. One sees them lunching quietly at the Ambassador and at the Embassy but seldom at large parties.

* * *

I PERSONALLY CANNOT see how "Easi Lynne" can be made to be anything other than a comedy. So many jokes have been written about the sob side of this melodrama that we cannot expect this modern generation to do anything more than laugh at the whole thing. If the Fox company wants to burlesque "East Lynne" fine and good but it isn't humanly possible to produce it as the old time melodrama. Times have changed too much since it was written. Clive Brook has been borrowed from Paramount and Conrad Nagel from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for two of the leading roles. They with Ann Harding, whom we announced in this column would play the sob sister role of the heroine, and Jim Kerrigan complete the cast. Frank Lloyd will direct so it would seem with this cast and such a director that the thing will be made in all seriousness. I await with interest the result.

BUSTER COLLIER, WILLIAM HAINES, BEBE DANIELS and MARILYN MILLER, forming an impromptu quartet. The ROBERT LEONARDS coming in after the dinner was well on to wee hours. JUNE COLLYER guest of honor at a party at GEORGE O'BRIEN'S night club. LUPE VELEZ and GARY COOPER apparently more devoted than ever at a ringside table at the same place. GOSSIP ALONG NEW YORK'S RIALTO

New York, Aug. 18.

Another play by Frederic and Fanny Hatton will be done this season. Lee Shubert will sponsor it under the title of "The Woman in the Cloud." The first Hatton piece in several years was placed on view a few days ago by David Belasco at his theater, the title being "Dancing Partner."

* * *

"The Woman in the Cloud," like "Dancing Partner," is an adaptation from the foreign tongue, and it will be tested by the Parish Players at Stony Creek, Conn., for eight days, beginning a week from today.

This same Parish group, it will be recalled, also tried out "Death Takes a Holiday" and "Troyka" prior to their Broadway productions.

* * *

Phil Baker, Aileen Stanley and Shaw and Lee are due for a very short vacation this year. They closed recently in "Artists and Models." Soon, if present arrangement hold good, they will leave for Chicago, where "Artists and Models" will open.

* * *

Lew Leslie's 1930 edition of "Blackbirds" will open in New Haven on Monday evening, September 1, at the Shubert Theater. Following a week's engagement here the all-colored revue will go to Boston for an indefinite run before taking its stand on Broadway.

The book for "Blackbirds" is by Flournoy Miller, formerly of the team of Miller and Lyles.

"SINS" OPENS AT STATE

"Sins of the Children," with a cast which includes the veteran stage actor, Louis Mann, Elliott Nugent, Robert Montgomery, Leila Hyams, Francis X. Bushman, Jr., Mary Doran, Henry Armetta, Jeane Wood, Lee Kohlmar and Robert McWade, opens at Loew's State today.

Childhood sequences in both the first and third generations play an important share in the story and a large number of children were interviewed in an attempt to get the proper types. In this connection, it is stated, Director Wood ran into the same problem which confronted Robert Z. Leonard, who directed a group of children for scenes in "Marianne." The frolicsome young stars could not be kept quiet, whereas absolute silence is essential during taking of talking scenes. After a few futile attempts at sh-shing, Wood took a hint from Leonard's tactics and passed out old-fashioned molasses candy.

In line with the culinary experiments of the picture came the paint of Louis Mann that working in "Sins of the Children" had cured him of his fondness for roast goose. It seems that the fowl had to be eaten during a Christmas dinner scene and by the time the episode had gone through the usual number of rehearsals and final "shots," Mann had eaten enough goose to become thoroughly satiated. The actor insists that in the three days during which the sequence was filmed he actually did away with the better part of three birds!

KEITH-ALBEE BILL SCORES

A fine RKO stage bill, and Richard Dix on the screen, this week provide another tiptop show for the Keith-Albee. The variety program has for headliner the exceedingly able Indian baritone, Chief Caupolican, whom Bostonians will recall for his splendid work with Edith Cantor in "Whoopee." The chief is a great singer.

Dix is seen and heard in "Shooting Straight," a Radio picture.

The story concerns the regeneration of a big city gambler. Combined with the drama of the picture is a strong romance with Mary Lawler, capable blonde from the legitimate stage. The cast includes Matthew Betz, Robert Emmett O'Connor, George Cooper and William Janney.

The well known vaudeville team of Chase and LaTour in their novel sketch called "Around the Corner" is another fine act on this week's stage show. Other acts are: Fauntleroy and Van, "Oklahoma Slickers"; Jack Hunter and Monty in a dance skit called "Steppin' Out," and Arthur Petley and his company offering aerial cleverness and comedy.

STRONG BILL AT MODERN

"Sweet Kitty Bellairs," screen version of the Belasco stage hit, is the feature of a double bill attraction at the Modern. Rin Tin Tin in "Rough Waters" is the secondary feature.

"Sweet Kitty Bellairs" has a cast including Claudia Dell, Ernest Torrence, Walter Pidgeon and Perry Askam. The story is based on the novel by Egerton Castle and was directed in picture colors by Alfred E. Green, the man who directed "Disraeli."

The story reveals the escapades of a flirt. The story takes place in England. "Sweet Kitty Bellaire" proves a vivacious little miss that might well get her man anywhere. Miss Dell hails from the stage and also played "Merry Mary" in London. This is her first screen appearance.

'THE MEDICINE MAN' AT PARK

"The Medicine Man," at the Park, reveals life in a medicine show, with its performers, spielers and band.

A stage play by Elliott Lester, adapted by Eve Unsell and continuity by Ladye Horton, provided the story which is an admirable vehicle for the talents of Jack Benny.

Betty Bronson is winsome and appealing as Mamie and Billy Butts is good as the kid.

"All Quiet" Is Booked for the Twin Houses

Public has booked into the Olympia and Uptown, the famous war film, "All Quiet On The Western Front." This production which enjoyed a long run at top prices will have its first Boston showing at popular prices at the theaters following the run of "Animal Crackers."

Al Katz and Kittens Going Big at Norumbega

Al Katz and his mewing kittens are entertaining at Norumbega Park's Totem Pole ballroom this week.

Not since Jan Garber left the new dancing pavilion a few weeks ago has dance music been so popular. Katz and his radio kat-a-log-ue numbers bid fair to make the season's record for attendance. The director created considerable comment when he selected a quintet of kittens for his orchestra, awarding prizes aggregating $20, including ice cream cones and free tickets to holders of feline pets. Katz continues at the ballroom for all this week.

Al Katz

Ruth Tester

Stage Who's Who

Ruth Tester, now in the "Second Little Show," holding forth for a second week at the Wilbur, has illusions of becoming a Pavlowa. She has studied for years with the best ballet teachers. She is always cast for dancing comedienne roles on account of her ability to mimic and make faces. But says people will never take her seriously. She attended Smith College, where she got As in the art and rowed on the crew. She went to New York after a few years of study. Her dancing ability got her a job in the chorus of "Lollipop"—her first appearance on any stage.

Zelda Sears saw and liked her. They became good friends. Zelda made Ruthie soubrette in her new comedy, "Lucky Break," which it proved for La Tester. Miss Tester is extremely fond of lollipops and coffee ice cream. Her hobby is swimming. She is 21 years old, has gray eyes and weighs 88½ pounds.

Citizenship Program Is Sent Out

Clubwomen Renew Efforts to Help Newcomers to Know American Ideals

By NANCY BREWSTER

"To help the newcomer to know and love American ideals an institutions; to give him the practical information he needs; to encourage his participation in our common life and to promote on the part of the native born a sympathetic understanding of the immigrant, his problems and institutions."

This is to be the fall program of the American clubwomen interested in American citizenship work.

It is the formal statement sent out to local chairmen by the chairman of the division of Americanization in the General Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Ellis Thurber. In Massachusetts, Mrs. Charles E. Danforth, State chairman of the international unity committee, will carry out the program.

"A million immigrants, a million opportunities, a million obligations. Are they an asset or a liability? What shall we do with them and what will they do with us, and American institutions," asks Mrs. Thurber.

"Today one-third of our entire population is foreign-born or children of foreign-born parentage. We have admitted them to our shores and to our destines. If we treat them as intruders, we fail. Rather must we welcome them as partners, partners who should be encouraged to learn our English language, to know our traditions and institutions, partners who are made to feel at home and given an equal opportunity."

Tweed-Knit for College or Town

By ANN ARDEN

Model from Jays, Inc.

THE TWEED knit costume is a boon to the college or business girl. The three piece suit pictured adopts the dotted line to smartness—the dots are tiny pin points, it is true, and woven in the material, but they remain one of the clever notes of the new mode.

* * *

WINE RED, flecked in white is the color scheme. Two deep pleats adorn each side front of skirt, the jacket is finely tucked at side and back to fit the waistline, and boasts two patch pockets. The waistcoat blouse is sleeveless, of kid angora wool, the edges bound in the flecked material, as are pockets and belt. The chenille beret can be adjusted in softly draped folds from forehead band of a lighter tone.

* * *

RED, USUALLY a good color for fall and winter, enters both the day and evening modes this season in more subtle ways than heretofore. It makes a bright bit of trimming. It appears as an overtone for a russet brown or a deep purple. From bright tones to a deep wine shade, it invades the sports mode.

* * *

WHETHER A sweater could becomingly grace the new fall tweeds now that fragile femininity has become a high fashion note, is a question that has been tucked away in our minds since we saw the first tweed pattern of the fabric counter. It has been adequately answered, however, by the appearance of smart lightweight sweaters that have the appearance of woven blouses. Sweaters of wool lace, too, answer that inquiry in a most charming manner.

* * *

THE PUMPKIN isn't the only thing the frost will appear upon this fall, for knitwear takes a hint from nature and frosts fall fabrics. There is a silvery sheen to many of the knitted materials that will make up fall suits and frocks. It gives a soft silky look to the rough surface and lends it a changing tone that is very effective.

* * *

HAVE YOU succumbed to a fall hat yet? It takes courage, we warn you. Not that they are not charming—but they are a bit unexpected. As we have said, browns are all over the place. Brims give one a rakish one-eyed look, in some cases. Other brims double on themselves and roll away in a distracting way. Madame Agnes has gone Robin Hood in some of her designs. Quills, jaunty brims and such.

Young Golfers to Sock Agate Around

"What a golf tournament we'll have down at Wollaston beginning next Monday," Bill Grimes said to Mr. Boston today.

"More than 350 youngsters have entered the Hearst Junior Golf Championship.

"The best of the local junior golfers will be on hand to bang the little agate around. You will see plenty of low scores.

Jack Conway

"Golf has made tremendous strides forward during the past few years. I agree with your statement, Mr. Boston, that golf has become a major sport. The baseball people may say golf isn't cutting in on other games, but I don't believe they are right. Thousands of people play golf instead of going to the ball game.

"Miniature golf courses and driving tees have also tended to steam up interest in golf.

"Youngsters now swing golf clubs instead of baseball bats, and how they swing them! Drop down to Wollaston next Monday and you'll see a flock of new golf heroes in action."

"Golf appeals to the young and old," said Mr. Boston. "I overheard an interesting conversation on golf the other night while riding down to the South Shore on the Standish.

"'Have you been playing much golf lately?' asked one commuter of a friend.

"'No,' was the reply. 'I have a bad pump and the doctor told me to keep away from golf.'

"'Better get a new doctor,' was the advice. 'My doctor once told me to give up golf, but I got another doctor who informed me I would be all right to play if I didn't permit myself to get too tired.'

"I guess I'll have to hire a medical expert who will give me the kind of advice on golf I'd like to hear. There is a big field for a golf doctor."

"Yes," went on the other commuter, a good drive does one more good than all the doctors in the world.'

Con O'Kelley Signed to Battle Dixon

Harry Kelley called Mr. Boston on the telephone to inform him that he has signed Con O'Kelley to meet Tiger Tom Dixon, heavyweight champion of New Hampshire, at Chick Hayes' Portland club tomorrow night.

"O'Kelley has been training for the past two weeks," said Harry. "The big fellow is in good condition and I feel he will lick Dixon."

Small Towns Drawing Well at Boxing

Mr. Boston finds that the small towns are drawing well at boxing shows as a result of their policy of featuring local boxers.

"Jack Murphy tells me," said Mr. Boston, "that Harry Allen and Jack McCarthy recently played to a $3000 gate at Brockton. He has rematched this pair for a return meeting on Labor day night and looks to draw even a bigger gate. Allen comes from Brockton, while McCarthy is a Roxbury boy. Local kids have a following.

"Murphy has Leslie Baker of Watertown and Mike Harrington of Providence billed to mingle in the semifinal of six rounds.

Doc Bagley to Train Bertazolla for Primo

"Doc Bagley, who once managed Gene Tunney, has taken charge of Riccardo Bertazolla's training for his 15-round bout with Primo Carnera which will be staged at Atlantic City on August 30. Bagley is one of the best handlers of boxers in the country.

"Carnera and Jim Maloney may be signed by Eddie Mack for a bout in this city.

"Fred Russo tips me that Nova Scotia will enter a team in the big amateur boxing tournament which will be staged by the Pilibov Post, V. F. W., at Somerville on August 27.

Snow Stars in Winthrop Meet

Ed Snow featured the first annual swimming meet of the Winthrop Beach Raft Association, held off Winthrop Shore drive and Beacon st., yesterday. Snow won three first places, capturing the 50-yard open for men, the mixed high diving and the men's lowboard diving. In the women's division Dorothy Pigeon featured.

Glenna Wins

Westport, N. Y., Aug. 18—Glenna Collett, national champion, won the women's annual Barkadale invitation tournament at the Westport Golf Club. She defeated Frances Snyder of Rye, 3 and 1.

57 GIRL NET STARS SEEK U.S. TITLE

New York, Aug. 18 (US) — With Helen Wills Moody and Helen Jacobs, absent for excellent reasons, the national singles tennis championship tournament for women begins at Forest Hills today. Nobody can predict just who will ascend Mrs. Moody's vacant throne.

Betty Nuthall of England, the Baroness Giacomo Giorgio Levi of Chicago and Italy, Edith Cross, Mrs. L. A. Harper, Josephine Cruickshank and Marjorie Gladman of California, Marjorie Morrill of Dedham, Mass.; Virginia Hilleary of Philadelphia and Sarah Palfrey of Brookline are grouped as the chief contestants for the succession.

Miss Nuthall, the young lady from Great Britain who gave Mrs. Moody her 8—6, 8—6 worries in the Wighman cup matches a year ago, would be an undoubted victor, it is generally conceded, were she motivating with the same skill of 1929.

Miss Nuthall does not appear to have regained her former power and it is this presumable decline which gives the other girls a chance.

Second possibilities to Miss Nuthall in the struggle—incidentally, no foreigner has taken the title overseas—will be the Baroness Levi, Miss Morrill, Mrs. Harper, Miss Hilleary and Miss Palfrey. Miss Cross and Miss Cruickshank cannot be reckoned with these five but still may astound the critics.

Mrs. Moody, desirous of staying in the West because of her marriage, and Miss Jacobs, ill, will not contend, but the very fact of their withdrawal has spurred the ambitious onward.

LARKSPUR IN HARTFORD RACE

Grand circuit racing will be held at Hartford for four days beginning tomorrow at Charter Oak. The meeting will be featured by a renewal of the Charter Oak purse and a series of events for trotting and pacing colts.

The Charter Oak purse is listed to be raced on Thursday and one of the best fields in history is expected to take the word.

Hollycrest Peter, winner of the $10,000 trot at Kalamazoo will be one of the starters in this race. Frank Britton accounted for the $10,000 event at Windsor in July, and then later took the $10,000 Goshen feature is another favorite entry.

Mrs. Charles F. Adams' three-year-old, Larkspur, looms as the favorite in the trotting event which will open the meeting. Larkspur will go against a lot of clever racing material including Daytide, Guy June, Hollyrod Patsy, McElvain and General Hanover. Hollyrood Pasy won in 2:06 at Cleveland.

The handicap race on Thursday looks like a banner event with the Widow Grattan, Harry D., The Royal Lady, Blushing Beauty and Trampsburg down to score. On the closing day of the meeting a number of speed marvels will be seen in the three-year-old pace. Among the list of eligibles are Arthur Mowry, Emmalou, Wild Dance, Hollyrood Ruth and Capitol Stock, winner of the Fox stake last year.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

Before anyone gets very far with golfing skill he must determine one thing finally, which is—how still still? This obviously relates to your head. We find what holding the head really still amounts to by experimenting with a putter. Here we can have a double lesson since we can see what head-still means and at the same time review a good putting method.

Now to putt I will ask you to place the ball so it is directly on a line with your nose. Square your blade back of it and sight the cup. Fix your line by moving the cup, so to speak, to a point directly in front of your ball. Determine to stroke just hard enough to send the ball up. Then fix all your weight on your left foot and anchor it. Fix your head and determine to make it stay still. Now putt. And note the difference.

HOPEFUL HEARST GOLFER AND ONE OF THE HURDLES

BILL DONNELLY, FORMER JUNIOR golf champion of this state, who is one of the favorites entered in the second William Randolph Hearst junior golf tournament at the Wollaston Golf Club on August 25. Bill is putting onto the 15th green at Wollaston, one of the hardest hazards that the boys must conquer in their battle for the trophies. Close to 400 golfers are due at Wollaston. Donnelly was runner-up in the first Hearst tournament at the Blue Hills Country Club. He lost to Joe Lynch in the finals.

Nearly 400 Boys Entered in Hearst Junior Tourney

Any suspicion that golf is not expanding far beyond the imagination of even the closest followers of the sport should be dispelled by the enormous entry for the Hearst junior championship, which will be played next week at Wollaston.

Just one week after the first announcement of the second annual Hearst junior championship was released the entries were closed, for the golf department of the Boston Evening American was swamped, almost 400 youngsters having filled out and mailed in entry blanks.

Two years ago, when the Hearst tourney was held at the Blue Hill Country Club, there were 243 entries, but due to the short notice it was predicted by some who are unfamiliar with conditions that a smaller field would compete at Wollaston. But, instead of reducing the ranks, the field is just twice the size of the first venture in Hearst junior championship classics.

With few exceptions all of the leading juniors in the state will compete at Wollaston. There will also be a number of Rhode Island boys on hand as well, and Johnny Brown from the Portland Country Club, who was the runner-up to Roland McKenzie in the Maine open championship at Poland Springs.

Unquestionably, the second Hearst will be the fastest junior championship ever staged, and the victor can justly claim the junior championship of New England.

During the week announcements of interest will be carried in these columns for those who have accepted. Transportation to Wollaston, the rules that will govern the tourney, and other essential details will be made clear so that everything will be ready when the first lad tees off a week from today at 9 a. m.

Mingo's Victory Is Protested by Indian

Marblehead's mid-summer yachting series officially came to a close yesterday afternoon when the Corinthian Yacht Club conducted the final day of its regatta in the waters of Marblehead Bay. It was a perfect day for sailing, and 244 boats took part.

The big feature of the day, the Bar Harbor 31-footers, over the 10½-mile course, was won by the Mingo, owned by George Lee. This was the second time in as many days that this boat crossed the finish line in first place. The Indian and Astrid. Walter Shaw's boats were the next to finish. The Mingo win was protested by the Indian.

In the Class Q, 25 rating over the same distance, C. F. Adams' Mal led in field home.

Corinthians Beat So. Lawrence, 3-2

The Corinthians of Revere defeated the South Lawrence soccer eleven, 3 goals to 2, in a close and hard-played game at Lawrence yesterday.

Green started the scoring 20 minutes after play began and at half time the tally stood 3 to 1 in favor of the visitors. McLey netted for the locals on the last kick before the half time whistle.

Fox-Hunting to Be Proposed as Sport

Canberra (AP)—Melbourne Hunt Club has decided to ask the highest judicial body of Australia whether fox-hunting is an athletic exercise.

If it is decided affirmatively the club will be exempt from taxes on its lands, kennel grounds and stables.

LOTT ADVANCES TO 3D ROUND

Newport, R. I., Aug 18 (AP)—George M. Lott, jr., member of the American Davis Cup forces, today gained the third round of the 14th annual Newport Casino invitation tennis tournament with an easy victory over James Van Alen of Newport, 6—1, 6—2, after receiving a first round.

Eddie Jacobs of Baltimore, also aided by the draw, kept pace with the internationalist by disposing of Henry Moore of New York, in almost the same decisive fashion, 6—2, 6—4.

Keith Gledill, rising young Californian, played but one match to enter the third round dropping but a single game to Christopher Emmet of Boston.

Ellsworth Vines of Pasadena, Calif., was equally strong in his first round match with Maurice Bayon of New Orleans, dropping one game in the opening set to the Tulane University player.

The first of the foreign delegation to go into action, L. A. Godfree, veteran leader of the British five-man team, bowed to Harrison Coggeshall of Des Moines, 6—3, 6—3, in another first rounder.

Johnny Doeg, Davis Cup substitute, got going in this important tourney by eliminating Louis Hobbs, another Newporter, 6—3, 6—4.

Notes of the Sandlots

Rival pitchers on the Boston College and Georgetown University baseball teams this past spring are now rival "masterminds" for the two top teams in the Cape Cod League. Harry Nozmesky of the Hilltoppers is managing Wareham, while Pete Herman of the Eagles is bossing Chatham.

The teams are neck and neck for the lead in the Cranberry Circuit. Both managers take their turns on the mound for their outfits. Herman, who captained Boston College, also takes a try at the outfield now and then, being a very good sticker.

Many of Frank "Bota" Nekola's friends have lost track of him since he left this section of the world. He pitched for Holy Cross and worked with Quincy in the Twilight League during the summer months. Nekola was purchased at the finish of his junior year at Holy Cross by the Yankees for a very handsome sum.

Hopedales Defeat Mt. Hope Nine, 6 to 2

The league-leading Hopedale Club of Allston won its ninth game in the last 10 starts when it handed the Mt. Hope team a 6-to-2 beating on the Smith playground diamond, Allston, yesterday afternoon.

John "Lefty" Norton is back with the Neponset Wanderers and pitching good ball. The young lefthander is one of the best in semi-pro baseball and had a try in the Eastern League. With Kyllander, winner of 16 in a row, and Norton, the Wanderers have one of the best mound staffs in Greater Boston.

Malden will tackle the rejuvenated Portland team in an important Twilight League game this evening at Malden. Portland has added Art Parisian, former Notre Dame football and baseball star; John Powers, formerly with Nashua in the N. E. League, and Scotty Slayback of Portland who was with Manchester in the N. E. circuit.

Portland halted Dorchester's rush a few weeks ago and may do the same to Malden tonight thus making up for the setback handed out to Dorchester which is right on Malden's heels for the league leadership.

Quarter Final Games for City Amateur Title

Four quarter final contests in the amateur baseball tournament being conducted by the Boston park department, with the assistance of the Community Service of Boston, are on the schedule for this evening.

With the final game scheduled for Saturday the interest in this tournament is increasing as the teams are being eliminated.

After tonight, four teams will be left in the running for the championship. One semifinal game will be played on Wednesday and another on Thursday, both at the new Fens Stadium.

The semifinal winners will play for the city championship on Saturday at the same place.

This evening the Gurnett & Co. nine, representative of the Bankers and Brokers League, will play the Mattapan Eagles, Walker playground champs, at the new Fens Stadium.

The other games will be widely separated. On the J. J. Connolly playground, Roxbury, the St. Augustine A. S., South Boston champions, with Johnny Kelly, all-scholastic star on the mound, oppose the Brighton T. T., Brighton winners. At Healy playground, Roslindale, the equipment team, telephone company title holders, will oppose the Kemper Insurance team, winners in the insurance league.

George Beaman, star Malden H. S. pitcher, will most likely hurl for the Kemper team.

The other game finds the crack Agawam A. A., a fine collection of sandlot stars, opposing either the Epicure team of Jamaica Plain or the Elmwoods of Dorchester.

Berg-Singer Too Friendly to Fight

New York, Aug. 18 (INS)—Jackie "Kid" Berg will not fight Al Singer for the world's lightweight title for the strange reason that the two boys "are pals," it was reported today.

Sol Gold, manager of the English boxer, it was said, will tell the New York Boxing Commission tomorrow that rather than risk an unblemished reputation for honesty, Berg will pass up the title bout. Gold said no less than six New York boxing writers have taken the stand that Berg and the champion are too friendly to be matched, and that they doubt either man would do his best.

"We would rather go without the title than fight Singer and have it said there was something funny about it," said Gold.

English Miss Swims Dardanelles Straits

Istanbul, Aug. 18 (INS)—Honors today were heaped upon Mercedes Gleitz, who swam the Dardanelles Straits Sunday in two hours and 55 minutes.

The plucky London stenographer thereby conquered in record fluke one of the most dangerous and treacherous waterways in the world.

Some time ago she swam the English chanel after previously suffering defeat six times.

By BILL GRIMES

Three more championships are listed for this week, the Easton today, the Caddies at Woodland tomorrow, and the Cape Cod open on Friday and Saturday. But activities in the competitive golf line are by no means confined to these championships.

Although there will be a large field competing in the annual three-day medal and match play invitation tournament of the Worcester Country Club, the South Shore Country Club and its Bear Hill Golf Club should both establish new attendance records.

Bill Grimes

Despite the fact that almost 200 played in the Bear Hill four-day invitation last week, few golfers can or care to devote more than one or two days a week to competitive golf. Therefore, the South Shore Country Club and Bear Hill will be taxed to capacity on Friday and Saturday.

South Shore will not experience an undue rush Friday, seeing the crowd as will Bear Hill, for the Hingham course is an 18-hole layout.

Mayor Curley to Play in K. C. Tourney at Wollaston

The Wollaston Golf Club will throw open its doors to the Knights of Columbus today. There will be a handicap tourney this morning and a four-ball match in the afternoon and all the delegates to the K. of C. convention are invited to attend.

There will be competition in four classes in the morning with a gross and net prize in each class. One division will be for players with a handicap of 10 or under, a second will be for players with a handicap between 10 and 20, a third will be for players with a handicap between 20 and 30, and a fourth will be for novices.

Mayor James M. Curley will be one of the participants in this morning's play.

The four-ball match in the afternoon will find Guilford and Ward opposing Wright and MacDonald, Atty. John Feeney will referee.

Members of the New England Professional Golfers' organization and their amateur partners are four balling their way around the picturesque Oak Hill Country Club at Fitchburg today. The new nine holes at Oak Hill rate with the best in the state and will offer a fine test for both the pros and the amateurs.

Phil Fahey, son of Tom Fahey, the well known Winchester Country Club greens keeper, is defending his caddie championship title against a large field today at Woodland. Young Phil Fahey captured the caddie crown last year at The Country Club and will be particularly hard to beat at Woodland.

14-Year-Old Star Not Entered in Tourney

Much surprise has been evidenced since it was learned that Tommie Quinn, the 14-year-older, who went to the second round of the Massachusetts junior championship at Belmont Spring, was not entered for the caddie championship.

The entries are restricted to two from a club and Harold McGrail and Tommy Fay were selected to represent The Country Club and John Quinan and Timmie O'Leary picked to carry the colors of Chestnut Hill.

Callahan Defends Title Next Monday

Fans Flay Red Sox for Lack of Fighting Spirit

LOCALS TAKE DEFEAT TOO EASILY

By JOE CASHMAN

No ball club can win every game, but every club can and should fight for victory in every start.

The Red Sox don't. They accept defeat too gracefully; allow the opposition and the umpires to get away with murder without uttering a word of protest. They try hard enough mechanically to win but that's all, and that's not enough, as their record proves.

Joe Cashman

There's little doubt that if they had shown a little more aggressiveness all season, they would be safe in sixth place right now and a whole lot more popular with the fans.

The native customers are the fairest in the land. They have supported tail end clubs for the last decade without complaining. But they won't stand for the absence of fight in a club, because they know there is no excuse for it.

The crowd at the Sunday doubleheader went home, finding fault not so much with the double defeat the Wagners suffered at the hands of the Indians as with the meekness of the home boys in defeat.

The umpiring was very bad in spots. Much of Lisenbee's wildness in the first game was due to poor eyesight on the part of Dick Nallin. Todt was called safe at first on one play and then ruled out, as Cleveland runner was called out and then safe. Another Indian was clearly guilty of interference at the plate.

Sox Take Poor Decisions Without a Protest

Yet, there wasn't a word of protest out of the Sox all afternoon. Had any other clash been treated in the same manner, the arbiters wouldn't have had a minute's peace the rest of the day.

There has been much criticism of the way the Sox have been treated by the "umps" this season. They have got the worst of it right along, but they have nobody to blame but themselves.

Umpires are human like the rest of us. They know that if they call a close play against the native little or nothing will I said about it, while if they call it the other way they will be mobbed by an army of protesting athletes. So, naturally, they follow the former course.

The Sox must have at least an even break in the luck to win. They rarely get it because they don't go after it.

If they had told the "umps" a few things on the Sabbath, the crowd would have overlooked many of their mistakes and they might have received a few of the close ones from the arbiters.

It shouldn't, of course, be necessary for a team to fight for what it deserves, but that happens to be the case and the Sox should demand their rights like all the other clubs.

A Little Fight Would Be Big Help to Team

If we aren't mistaken, Charlie Berry is the only Sox player who has been banished from the park this year. If the boys really had their heart and soul set on winning, every one of them would have been ejected several times, so tough have been many of the decisions rendered against them.

The fans don't demand victory. All they want is a run for their money.

They don't feel that they are getting that, though, when they go out and watch the Wagners allow everybody to step all over them without battling back, and they won't keep turning out unless the locals show a little more pep.

It's too late now for fight to do the Sox any good, but just the same they should start in right now getting mad occasionally, and learn how it will help them, not only in the won and lost column but also at the box office.

And those players who refuse to get steamed up should be let out without delay.

100 TO 1 SHOT TAKES PURSE IN $25,000 RACE

Owner Chaffee Earl

Jockey Baker

The above International Newsreel photo shows Chaffee Earl, owner of Jim Dandy, which won the $25,000 Travers stake at Saratoga. One hundred to one was paid to the few fortunates who bet on the runner. Gallant Fox and Whichone, great racers, were favorites. Jim Dandy, a fine mud horse, soundly trounced the latter pair.

Games Tonight—Portland at Malden; Dorchester at St. John.

Malden slugged its way to victory over Roslindale, 17 to 6, at Roslindale in the only Boston Twi League game contested yesterday. Every member of the winning team made at least one safe bit, with O'Connor having a perfect record of four safe hits, including three doubles, in as many times at bat.

Thurston continued to celebrate his return to the Malden lineup by getting four hits out of five attempts. Fred Loftus, on the hill for the winners, kept the hits of the Roslindale sluggers well scattered.

BRAVES WIN TWIN BILL

Cincinnati, Aug. 18 (INS)—The Boston Braves continued their late spurt, taking a doubleheader from the Reds, 4 to 3 and 9 to 6.

The second game was a heartbreaker for the home lads. Making a ninth inning rally, they tied the count at eight all. Going into the 13th, the Braves tallied two.

For a moment it looked as though the Reds would equal this effort, but one run was the best they could do. Each team used five pitchers.

Hurls No-Hit Game at Night

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 18 (AP)—Glenn Jones, young Springfield Three Eye league hurler, has a record that can't be taken away—that of pitching the first no-hit game in night baseball.

Jones last night defeated Decatur, 4 to 1, in the second game of a night double header. He set some other king of a record when he walked 13 men and still managed to hold his opposition to one run.

Lipton to Look Over Shamrock Tomorrow

New York, Aug. 18 (INS)—Refreshed from a day of quiet, Sir Thomas Lipton, British yachtsman, was to visit Hoboken today on business and tomorrow he will board his yacht Erin for New London, where he will look over the Shamrock V.

The Shamrock V is being prepared to race the American defender at the Connecticut coast city. A 53-foot top section of the mainmast of the Shamrock has been fitted in, Sir Thomas was advised today, and all that remains to make the challenger ready for trials is scraping and repainting of the hull.

Cooper Takes First Money at St. Paul

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 18 (INS)—Harry Cooper of Glen Ellyn, Ill., today pocketed $2,500 as his reward for walking off with first honors in the St. Paul $10,000 open golf tournament yesterday with a total of 280.

Cooper shot four rounds of 69, 73, 68 and 70, eight strokes under par, to enjoy a three-stroke margin over his closest rival, Tony Manero of New York, who finished second with 283. Horton Smith of New York was third with 285.

Reveille Boy May Race Jim Dandy

Chicago, Aug. 18 (INS)—John Schank, president of the Hawthorne Jockey Club, went ahead today with plans for a race here in October which would bring together Jim Dandy and Reveille Boy, the two outstanding turf surprises of the year.

Schank said he was arranging to offer a purse of $50,000 for the contest.

Reveille Boy proved the first great surprise of the year when he won the American Derby last June and paid $113.08 for every two dollars invested in the mutuel booths. Jim Dandy did somewhat better in the Travers at Saratoga on Saturday when he beat Gallant Fox and Whichone at odds of 100 to 1.

WOOD'S BOAT HITS 90 M. P. H.

Detroit, Aug. 18 (AP)—Gar Wood, who will defend the Harmsworth speedboat trophy against the aspirations of Miss Marion (Betty) Carstairs of England on Aug. 30 to Sept. 1, drove his Miss America IX at a speed above 90 miles an hour at Algonac yesterday.

Returning to Detroit late last night the American sportsman expressed himself as pleased with the performance of the craft. He did not know the exact speed attained as no timer was present. He planned to make further tests today.

The Miss America IX is similar in design and in power plant—it has two 12-cylinder motors—to the Miss America VIII, her companion boat. The latter has attained 93 miles an hour, and Wood believes that the new boat will go faster.

"We are not trying anything phenomenal," he said. "But we felt that we needed another boat to make certain that we would not be caught flat-footed by the English.

B. C. GRIDMEN WILL REPORT SEPT. 2

Joe McKenney, coach of the Boston College football team, will greet a husky bunch of grid candidates at the Heights on September 2 and preparations will begin immediately on a season that should find the Eagles up near the top of the collegiate football heap again when it winds up early in December.

McKenney will have a wealth of good material to work with, but there will be large gaps to fill, and Joe will have to be in good luck to find boys capable enough to fill the shoes of those who have vacated them.

Charley Murphy, the end; Pete Herman, the massive tackle, and Captain Paddy Creedon, the courageous quarterback, have been graduated and they were among the finest football players B. C. has ever had.

John Dixon will lead the Eagles on the grid this season. He'll take care of one end more than adequately, just as he has for three years past. The tackle berths will find Bill Bennett, Jack Young and Hank Plausse ready. There is plenty of guard material in Al Morelli, Bud Gorman, Frank DiPesa, John Maloney and Dan Larkin.

John Divenuti, out a year ago with appendicitis, will battle for the other wing berth with Henry Buckley and Ed Gallagher.

Flavio Tosi, Phil Couhig, Mike Romano and Jim Slamin are four pips coming up from the freshman line with numerous other boys.

McKeney's work will be cut out to find a suitable quartet for the backfield. He has George Colbert, Chessy Antos, Johnny Mary, Ed Buckley, Mike Vodakis, Al Cruz, Joe Shea and others.

Pete Cheonolovitch, Johnny Cassidy, Joe Rosier, Lou Musco and other backs on last year's freshman team will be ready to try for berths. Cassidy is a threat for the quarterback berth, while Musco is a classy fullback.

Donald Fleet, the fast quarterback, is another back that Joe will look over. All in all, the Eagles aren't too badly off. But Joe has got a job on his hands to get up a strong team that will go through the season without a smirch, though this isn't unlikely with McKenney at the helm and a group of healthy hard-working boys under him.

The Eagles open on Sept. 20 with Catholic University and tackle one of their hardest foes, the Quantico Marines, the following week as part of the American Legion convention.

3 SWIMMING RECORDS SET

Newport, R. I., Aug. 18—Three new world's swimming records for women were established at the new Roman Pool at Newport Beach yesterday. Agnes Geraghty, national breast stroke champion believed her own mark of 1:15 seconds for 200 yards by five and three-fifths seconds.

Eleanor Holm, 300-meter backstroke champion, lowered her own record by two minutes and four-fifths seconds by swimming the distance in four minutes, 44 1-5 seconds.

Lea Lindstrom, Almeida, Calif., clipped two seconds from her own record for the 700-year free-style swim in the fast time of 10 minutes, 27 seconds.

Springfield Cyclist Wins Championship

Muskegon, Mich., Aug. 17 (AP)—Three new champions were crowned here today in four events of the 1930 national championship motorcycle hill climb, which is sponsored by the American Motorcycle Association.

Gene Rhyne of Chicago won both the 45-cubic inch and 74-cubic inch professional events. Don Smith of Fort Worth, Texas, won the 21-cubic inch amateur event in 17.18 seconds. Edward House of Springfield, Mass., won the 80-cubic inch amateur event in 18.72 seconds.

Sutter Captures Eastern Title

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 18—Clifford Sutter, Tulane University tennis star won the Eastern grass courts singles title yesterday, defeating Gregory Mangin of Newark, N. J., No. 10 on the national ranking list, 4—6, 8—6, 7—5, 4—6, 6—3.

The women's singles title went to Marjorie Gladman or Santa Monica who won from Baroness Giacomo Levi of Italy, 7—5, 4—6, 8—6.

Virginia Rice, Boston, and her Cincinnati partner, Clara Zinke, took the w men's doubles by turning back Virginia Hillesey, Philadelphia, and Dorothy Andrus, Stamford, Conn., 6—3, 7—5.

Berkeley Bell, 1929 intercollegiate title holder from Austin, Tex., and Eddie Jacobs, Baltimore, carried off the men's doubles with a straight set victory over the English team of H. G. N. Lee and S. J. Perry, 6—4, 8—1, 7—8.

Clan MacGregor Wins Soccer Title

Clan MacGregor of Quincy won the Boston and District soccer league championship by defeating Norwegian Americans, 4 to 3, in a thrilling play-off at Lusitania Stadium, Cambridge, yesterday afternoon.

DIAMOND PICK-UPS

It looks as though the Indians have picked up a real diamond gem in Montague, their new shortstop. The rookie, who hails from New Orleans, made four singles and a double and drew three bases on balls in 10 times up and fielded his position beautifully in the Sabbath twin-bill against the Sox.

One man did about all the hitting for the Sox in each game. Webb getting three safeties in the opener and Regan getting two, or half the natives' total, in the nightcap.

Whatever the Sox pitchers did during their two-day vacation, none of them had any idea where the plate was at the Wigwam. Lisenbee walked five, Morris two, Smith four and MacFayden two.

It was the generosity of the flingers that made the Wagners look so bad in the opener. Lisenbee and Morris giving six passes in the fifth inning after two were out to enable the Indians to score five times on one clean hit and put the game on ice.

They don't call Johny Hodapp, Cleveland second-sacker, "beauty," but they ought to. Just like Dave Bancroft, who was finally christened it, Hodapp yells "beauty" almost every time a pitch crosses the plate.

Up to the time Lisenbee went wild and had to be removed with two gone in the fifth, 12 of the enemy had been retired on fly balls. Wagner and Regan, each with one, were the only Sox who had assists. It's hard to understand how a pitcher that was going along as well as "Hod," could go bad so suddenly.

Phil Todt hit the ball hard all afternoon. He made a double in the ninth inning and Earl Averill robbed him of a triple and the Sox of a run by a great running catch against the fence in left center, the fielding gem of the day.

The Sox and Cleveland are running a great race for the honor of leading the American League in double plays. Going into the first contest yesterday the Sox were one up but now they are three in front of the Tribe by four and the Indians but one during the two games.

Russ Scarritt made his first appearance in the lineup since he broke his finger at the start of the last Western trip when he went to bat for Warstler in the second game and was robbed of a hit by a leaping catch by Hodapp.

The Knights of Columbus, now in command of the Hub, will be the guests of President Bob Quinn of the Sox at Fenway Park this afternoon.

REPORT THAT 'FOX' WAS DRUGGED

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 18 (INS)—Authorities are conducting a secret investigation of the report Gallant Fox was tampered with before his disappointing race in the Arlington classic.

The writer was informed today that William Woodward, vice-chairman of the Jockey Club and proud owner of the great three-year-old, attributes the defeat of his champion in the Travers midsummer derby to the after effects of the drug which was administered to his title-holder following his final workout for the Arlington classic.

Gallant Fox has never been the same thoroughbred since his final trial for the mid-western stake. The sturdy son of Sir Gallahad 3d-Marguerite refused to eat following this workout. His race in the Arlington classic proved to his owner and trainer that he was far below his true form.

Later, when the Belair stud champion refused to eat what was placed before him, the suspicion arose that perhaps he might have been tampered with.

A close observation was maintained for 24 hours. It was after this that Owner Woodward ordered his great three-year-old withdrawn from the Arlington Cup. He was immediately shipped to Saratoga.

Gallant Fox did not run his race in the Travers stake on Saturday.

The mere fact the mile and a quarter race run in the slow time of 2:08 is enough to prove something vitally wrong was troubling the great thoroughbred champion.

Whichone bowed a tendon in the Travers and will be retired to the stud.

WHITES WIN IN POLO TEST TILT

Port Washington, L. I., Aug. 18—Tommy Hitchcock led his team of whites to a five-goal rally and a last-minute victory over the team of reds in a test match between teams from which America's polo tour will be chosen for the matches with Great Britain next week.

The whites were again the team which has come to be regarded as America's tentative choice for the matches next month, Eric Pedley, Earle A. Hopping Hitchcock and Winston Guest. Opposing them were Americus candidates and two of the British squad. Little Pete Bostwick started at No. 1 to be replaced by Elmer Boeske in the second half, Cecil Smith rode throughout at No. 2, and Lord Balding of England played the first half at No. 3, Robs Williams of Texas, played first half at back and the second at No. 3 and Adrian Roark, also of the British group, was back in the last four periods.

Shields Winner of Maine Net Title

Portland, Me., Aug. 18—Frank X. Shields won a straight-set victory over Perry Rockafellow, Maine state singles champion, by 6—2, 6—2, 6—3.

Elizabeth Hugus, West Virginia champion, won the women's singles title, defeating Margaret Cluett of Troy, N. Y., 6—3, 5—7, 6—4.

The doubles crown in the women's matches was won by Marion Wing of Schuyler Island and Rosamond Newton of Brookline, Mass., over Evelyn Ames and Mrs. H. G. Beyer of Portland, 6—3, 6—3.

Medford Girl Is Meet Star

MARY CAREW WINNER IN TITLE RACE

Mary Carew of Medford, national women's indoor 40-yard and outdoor 50-yard sprint champion, added another crown, the N. E. A. A. U. 50-yard championship, when she defeated Olive Hasenfus by two yards in the feature event of the Boston Swimming Association track meet at Norumbega Park, yesterday afternoon. Margie McGlone of Natick finished third.

Laura Sullivan of the Boston Swimming Association and Hingham set a new N. E. A. A. A. U. record in the invitation basketball throw when she hurled the ball 221 feet 4 inches, fully 11 feet beyond the old mark.

One surprising upset occurred when Rena McDonald of the Boston Swimming Association, world record holder in the shotput, was beaten by a teammate, Alice Morris in the discus throw. Rena arrived on the scene of activity so late that she was allowed only three throws and competed with a painfully sprained finger, which she sustained in the national championships. Miss Morris hurled the platter 89 feet 8 inches, two feet beyond Miss McDonald's best attempt.

Miss McDonald won the shot put with a heave of 35 feet 2¾ inches, almost four feet in advance of the mark reached by Lillian Denecn of the Medford Girls' Club in second place. Alice Morris, the discus victor, was third in this event.

In the battle for the 50-yard championship, Olive Hasenfus coasted home to victory in the first heat with Margie McGlone a fighting second. Miss Carew then easily took the second heat from Pansy Madeira of the Boston Swimming Association.

The final found Miss Carew, Olive Hasenfus, New England record-holder at 100 yards; Pansy Madeira, New England 100-yard champion, and Margie McGlone, junior 220-yard champion, going to the starting line. All four left the start evenly, and the race resulted in a duel between Miss Carew and Miss Hasenfus. Mary was too strong, however, and ran a front race to win by two yards.

Mary Carew Also Wins Invitation Century

The Medford flier maintained her spendid form in the 100 yard invitation race also and took the longest sprint easily ahead of Olive Hasenfus, who finished second again. Mary's sister, Catherine, gained third place in this race.

Margaret Proctor, school teacher of the Lunenburg Girls' Athletic Club, took the javelin invitation victory back to the western part of the state with a heave of 109 feet 4 inches, less than three feet behind the record for the spear throw.

Mabel Broman of the Brockton's Girls' Athletic Club added another win for the invaders from outside of Boston when her trial leap of 15 feet 3¾ inches landed her in first place in the running broad jump. Lorraine Orcutt, the entertaining club showed the greatest improvement in this event when she went from fifth place in the trials to second in the final standing.

Helen Philips accounted for another victory for the Boston Swimming Association when she was the only competitor able to clear a 4 feet 10 inches in the running high jump with Sylvia Bronsan of Brockton, sister of the broad jump winner, in second place.

Hapgood Chosen as A. A. Loop Chairman

Walter Hapgood of Montreal, was named chairman of the b-committee to draw up the recommendations of the Class AA representatives which will be sent to every club president of the International-American Association and Pacific Coast leagues for study prior to the joint meeting of the minors in Montreal, December 3-5.

Other members of Mr. Hapgood's committee were Oscar J. Smith of Toledo and Charles H. Graham. Besides these men, delegates to the AA joint meeting in Chicago, August 5, at which this action was taken, were George M. Weiss of Baltimore, Ed Warren of Rochester, eorge E. Muehlebach of Kansas City and R. J. Connery of St. Paul.

"Bots" Nekola May Go to Wilkesbarre

Off again, on again, Finnegan. This seems to be the ittuation as regards the present status of Pitcher Frank Nekola.

A short while ago the St. Paul Saints of the American Association announced that Nekola, who had been with the Saints on option from the New York Yankees, had been transferred to the Milwaukee Brewers.

A few days later, St. Paul announced that the deal had been cancelled and that Nekola would remain with Bob Connery's club.

Meanwhile, Wilkes-Barre of the N. Y. P. League thought it had completed a deal with the Yankees for Nekola, and Baron officials have been wondering why he failed to report. The tangle has not yet been unraveled, and Wilkes-Barre still has high hopes of landing the hurler.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

NEW ENGLAND SPRINT QUEEN

MARY CAREW, 16-year-old Medford high school girl, added the New England 50-yard sprint title to the many others she holds by winning this event in a meet under the auspices of the Boston Swimming Asso., at Norumbega yesterday.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

Art Ross, manager of the Boston Bruins, has donated a trophy which will be put into competition next year when the Marshfield Country Club holds its first open tournament on its new 18-hole layout.

This trophy will be known as the Marshfield Shield and will be presented to the club which turns in the four best scores during the Marshfield open. Competition will be open to all clubs in the state, the only restriction being that the four-man teams must be named before the tournament. It will be a perpetual trophy and must be defended annually, or go by default.

For one who has played little or no competitive golf, Hal Pierce, former president of the M. G. A., was the standout of the Essex County Club four-ball invitation last week. Paired with Mel Merritt, Pierce went through to the finals in the championship flight, but the elements, plus lack of experience, proved too much of a barrier for him to negotiate.

Percy Goodale came close to being the victim of a boy's honesty at New Bedford last week. Goodale saw his opponent's ball go out of bounds at the 13th hole, but upon reaching the green, there was a ball with his opponent's initials on it. Unable to understand the situation, they played out the hole, which Goodale won, but the mystery was solved on the 16th hole, when a boy out in the road asked if they had found the ball he had thrown back from the street.

Judging from the gross scores at Ould Newbury, they must have softened up that course. It was only a few years ago when there was a standing offer of a large trophy for any player who broke 80 at Ould Newbury.

The tournament committee at the South Shore Country Club has decided to have one gross prize in Class A, B and C. Or the posters only set prizes are mentioned, but yesterday it was voted to reward the low gross man in each of these divisions as well as the net.

The Country Club of New Bedford invitation last week was the greatest tournament of its kind ever staged in New England. The attendance exceeded the wildest dreams of any of the committee and in spite of the crowded conditions, everyone enjoyed every minute of his stay at New Bedford. Next season, New Bedford will put on a strictly invitations tournament limited to 125 players.

Many of the contestants at New Bedford will discover that Fred Corcoran has done a job on their handicaps when they make their next appearance in open competition. Freddie has his eye on Bill Waterbury, Salem, and L. George Arlmont, both of whom stepped through low handicap players to win classes.

Orioles Bothered by Floodlights

The Baltimore Orioles were visibly botehred by the lights in the night game in Jersey City, Aug. 4, Fritz Maisel's men having six errors charged against them.

The Jersey City Skeeters won the game, scoring a 7 to 5 victory before 8000 fans.

NO-HIT GAME BY TWI HURLER

Joseph Russell turned in the first no-hit-no-run full nine inning game of the Hub Twilight League when he let down the Hyde Park A. A. without the semblance of a binge at the Newton Upper Falls diamond to give the first half champions a 3 to 0 win.

Russell passed two batsmen during the game and one Hyde Park man reached third base. Georg Corrigan was opposed to Russell and he lost his first game in seven starts, although pitching good ball.

Newton scored two runs in the second inning when Andy Gunwright reached on an error, Jim Simpson tripled and Stanton plugged to score Simpson. In the seventh the Newton team added a third run on some clean hitting.

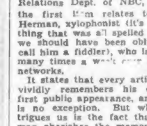
Concerning Radio

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

In some broadcast propaganda received from the Press Relations Dept. of NBC, N. Y., the first item relates to Sam Herman, xylophonist (it's a good thing that was all spelled out, or we should have been obliged to call him a fiddler), who is heard many times a week over the big networks.

It states that every artist very vividly remembers his or her first public appearance, and Sam is no exception. But what intrigues us is the fact that Herman cherishes the memory of a beer garden in Williamsburgh, for it was there he got his start as a xylophonist. There doesn't seem to us to be anything extraordinary in such publicity; there are a great many persons who cherish memories of the same order.



We have a letter from Morris —well, just Morris will do!—who lives in Brookline. He says: "In looking over your discourses on the movements of the electrons in vacuum tubes, in today's radio column, I think I have discovered the cause of the great drouth and the recent hot weather in Boston—viz: That the sun is only 90 miles away, or presumably was, awhile ago, instead of its normal distance of 93 million miles."

Hang it all, we just knew when we refused to give a printer a pipeful of tobacco he'd get back at us somehow. Went and left out the 'million' word, between the 90 and miles. And Morris picked us up on it. Want you to understand it wasn't our error—at least we doubt it.

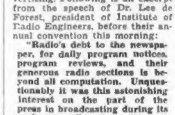
Speaking about planets reminds us that Evangeline Adams, noted astrologist who has reached the heights of that profession, and who broadcasts over WNAC every Monday, Wednesday and Friday even'g, has decided to devote three minutes each during her next twelve broadcasts to explain the signs of the zodiac, and her purpose is to teach astrology over the air, but to give listeners some new astrological knowledge concerning the twelve edit . . . the Columbia Dispatch, Columbus, Ohio, and in which epistle he asks if he may have the courtesy of a couple of lines . . . esteemed journal, notifying our readers that two years of his will be on the air tonight.

You bet we will do it. Not only must we newspaper scribes stick together, but also out of respect to the recently departed radio editor of this paper, "All My Love For You" will be played as the premiere during the Victor Young Orchestra broadcast tonight, Maytag Concert—over WBZ-WBZA at 9 o'clock.

Here is a thought we wish to leave with our readers, and particularly with those who do advertising. Following is an excerpt from the speech of Dr. Lee de Forest, president of Institute of Radio Engineers, before their annual convention this morning:

"Radio's debt to the newspaper, for daily program notices, program reviews, and their generous radio sections is beyond all computation. Unquestionably it was this astonishing interest on the part of the press in broadcasting during its early struggling days, 10 years ago, which alone enabled it to survive those crucial years until it awakened popular interest made radio self-supporting. A debt which will be partially repaid only when certain forms of advertising most obviously ill-suited for radio's medium go back to the printed sheet."

As dramatic as Shakespeare, is tonight's General Motors' program heard over WEEI at 9:30, for it is the last program which Don Voorhees conducts. After a glamorous season of batoning he relinquishes the stick to Frank Black after tonight. Let's join and give Mr. Voorhees a big hand as he closes his conducting in a blaze of glory. Music from four countries, closely linked in race and culture happens to be grouped for this broadcast. Johann Strauss represents Austria with his waltz, "Tales From the Vienna Woods." Richard Wagner stands up for Germany when the orchestra plays, in tote, "Tannhauser." Scandinavia offers Grieg, by his triumphal march from "Sigurd, the Crusader." England comes in for her share of the glory with the playing of two country dances, "Pastoral Dance" and "Merrymakers Dance," by German.



William Fay appears in a dual role tonight on the Stromberg Carlson program heard over WBZA at 10 o'clock. He will be featured as baritone besides continuing his regular job as announcer of this program. He will sing "Ina the Silent Night" and "The Mirror."

The sadness that has prevaded the ether ones more assumes a cheery mein, for Ray Perkins, the 'Old Topper' who departed for parts unknown a few weeks ago is back, this time on the "Sign of the Shell" program over WEEI at 10:30 tonight. Add this good news to the fact that Stanley Kasel and his "Kassels in the Air" orchestra are now a weekly feature on this program. Wendall Hall continues as master of ceremonies, but he will not be overworked as he has been in the past, for Ray Perkins and the orchestra will share the spotlight. Tonight the former sings "Plodin' Along," and Ray does a monologue skit and sings "The Cruise of the Robador."

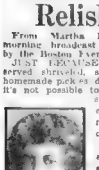
Here's Way to Make Zippy Relishes

From Martha Lee's Monday morning breakfast chat WHDH by the Boston Evening American.

JUST BECAUSE you've been served shriveled, soft or hollow homemade pickles don't think that it's not possible to make crisply succulent relishes and pickles right in your own kitchen.



Martha Lee

Soft pickles are the result of a brine too weak to prevent the growth of the bacteria which cause spoilage. You need one and one-third cups of salt to one gallon of water to insure crisp pickles. But on the other hand, too much salt or sugar or too strong vinegar will cause pickles to shrivel and become tough. Hollow cucumber pickles are caused by using cucumbers that have been withered for some time before they were placed in the pickle solution. Cucumbers and other pickle materials should be put into the brine immediately after gathering, whenever possible.

I have for you today some of my favorite and most reliable recipes for pickles and relishes.

CUCUMBER PICKLES

Leave a short stem on cucumbers. Wash half a peck of small cucumbers and pack them into a crock or enameled kettle. Cover with weak brine made in the proportion of one cup of salt and two quarts of boiling water. After several days pour off the brine, bring to boil and pour it back on the cucumbers. At the end of the week remove the cucumbers, pack in glass jars and cover with a pickling liquid made by boiling a gallon of pure cider vinegar with a cup of dark brown sugar and an ounce each of celery, black mustard and white mustard seeds. A small red pepper or two in each jar adds to the flavor and to the appearance. The fruit just given is good also for plain mixed pickles.

MUSTARD PICKLES

1 large cauliflower, broken into flowerets
1 qt. button onions
1 qt. tender green or wax beans
1 qt. carrots, cut in strips
1 qt. small green tomatoes
2 sweet green peppers cut in 1-in. squares of diamond shapes
2 powdered red peppers cut like green peppers
1 qt. small whole cucumbers
2 qts. cucumbers sliced without paring
2-3 cup flour
8 ounces mustard
1 tbsp. turmeric
1 tbsp. celery seed
2 cups sugar
1 tbsp. salt
2 qts. cider vinegar

Steam or cook all the vegetables except cucumbers until just barely done. Wash the cucumbers and cover them with a salt solution (1 cup salt to 2 quarts of water) and let them stand while the other vegetables are cooking and the mustard dressing is being prepared. Mix flour, spices, sugar and salt, and put them in a saucepan. Stir in a little vinegar and set over heat. Cook, adding the vinegar gradually, and continue stirring until the dressing is thick and smooth. Add the vegetables including the drained cucumbers. Boil one minute and seal and sterilize jars. (The vegetables may be varied to suit your likes and conveniences.)

CHOW CHOW.

Remove stem-end and all blemishes from ½ bushel of green tomatoes. Put through food chopper and drain thoroughly. Then put through food chopper 3½ pounds onions, 1 pound sweet green peppers, 1 pound red peppers (seeds removed). Mix with chopped tomatoes and add 1¼ qts. of vinegar, 1½ tbsp. cinnamon, 1¼ tbsp. spices, 1 tbsp. cloves, 1 cup sugar, 2½ tbsp. salt. Boil 30 minutes. Pack in sterilized glass jars.

PEPPER RELISH.

Mix 2 qts. of chopped cabbage, 2 qts. chopped celery, 1 qt. chopped green peppers, 1 qt. chopped red peppers, 2 ounces white mustard seed, 2 ounces black mustard seed, 2 tbsp. salt, 2 tbsp. sugar. Cook slowly in enough cider vinegar to cover until the vegetables are done. Pack in sterilized jars while hot and seal.

BORDEAUX SAUCE . . .
6 large onions chopped
½ gallon chopped green tomatoes
1 gallon chopped cabbage
½ cup salt
¾ cup sugar
2 ounces white mustard seed
½ ounce celery seed
½ ounce each black pepper cloves, ginger and turmeric
2 qts. cider vinegar

Mix well and boil 20 minutes. Seal in sterilized jars.

That's all there's room for today, but a little note addressed to me at 5 Winthrop sq. will bring other delicious pickle and relish recipes at once. Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Easy Way to Make a Tasty Dessert

BUTTERSCOTCH ICE BOX CAKE makes tasty dessert for both cool and hot days. It is economical and easy to make.

Economical Ice Box Cake Wins Weekly Prize

HAVE YOU been thinking of ice box cake as something too elaborate and expensive for every-day cookery? If so, do try this recipe for Butterscotch Ice Box Cake, which wins the $5 weekly recipe prize for Mrs. Ann Stoddard, 681 Massachusetts ave., Boston.

While this Butterscotch Ice Box Cake can be built in really professional style inside of an encircling crown of ladyfingers in a spring mold, it can also be made—and equally deliciously—in your favorite mixing bowl with thin slices of stale cake, instead of the more expensive ladyfingers.

If you are going to make it in a mold, line the bottom of the mold with thin slices of stale cake and stand the circle of ladyfingers around the edge. If you are going to use a bowl, line the bowl with the stale cake in slices, using almost any kind of cake except fruit or chocolate.

Now mix the contents of one package of food Luck Vanilla Cream (10c) with enough cold milk to dissolve it—(about ¾ cup of milk). Place 2½ cups of milk in a double boiler and bring to a scald (when but add the dissolved filling. Scant tablespoon of butter, the beaten yolks of 2 Ho d's eggs and 1 cup of brown sugar. Cook over hot water stirring constantly until thick (about 10 minutes). Beat the whites of the 2 eggs until very stiff and add gradually 2 tablespoons of powdered sugar. Cut and fold this into the custard mixture.

If convenient add a few chopped nut meats or some pieces of chopped maraschino cherries, or a few seedless raisins; 2 tablespoons of Guasti sweet cooking sherry is a great improvement too. Now pour a layer of this custard into your mold or bowl. Cover with another layer of stale cake slices of ladyfingers and then continue to alternate the filling and the cake until the bowl is filled.

Set away in the ice box over night or at least five or six hours and when ready to serve, add if desired a topping of whipped cream, decorated with chopped nuts and thin slices of maraschino cherries.

Remember this weekly recipe contest is open to all our readers. Recipes should be built around one or more foods advertised in this paper and mentioned by brand name.

Recipe That's Century Old

Listen, New England homemakers, to a tale I have to tell this morning about golden almond macaroons.

Once upon a time—for this macaroon story is really like a fascinating fairy tale—in a little convent built on the rocky hillside of the village of St. Emilion, France, a new delicious delish, a pastry and a confection in one, originated. The nuns discovered the art of grinding almonds and combining them with sugar and eggs in that dainty delicacy we know today as macaroons.

For years this secret was jealously guarded, and then came the French Revolution. The convent was sacked and the precious recipe given to the world. Yet all too often it fell into the hands of those who did not use the care that should have gone into the making, and their macaroons were not the same as the macaroons of St. Emilion.

Today, right here in Boston, in a popular department store—(which I'll whisper is located at the corner of Winter and Washington sts.)—golden almond macaroons are made by an artist chef, with the same skill and care used by the nuns, with the advantage of better baking in gleaming white electric ovens. They are great, fat, moist-sized macaroons, plump enough to satisfy the most greedy, and rich enough in flavor to tempt the most particular. They are baked fresh daily right in this store, and once you have tried your own be sure that you'll go back for many a dozen—especially when you find out how extremely reasonable they are. I can tell you confidentially that they are made from the same formula used at a fashionable shop in Atlantic City, where they are sold for $1 a dozen.

Yes, right here in Boston, you can get these same mouth-watering delicacies for only 50 cents a dozen. I know you'll be interested to drop in and see under what clean and sanitary conditions these popular cakelets are made. Notice especially the gleaming white ovens and see how white-gloved assistants assure you that these macaroons are never touched by hands in the making or packing.

We've used them here in the Martha Lee School, not only to serve with our favorite beverages but as a basis for many new and delightful desserts. I'll be glad to send you the recipes for some of them, if you like—for Macaroon Charlotte Russe, Mock Biscuit Tortoni, Macaroon Ice Cream, Baked Apples with Golden Almond Macaroons, and many others equally delicious.

Attack Made on Tris in the Dark

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Judith Archer is a country school teacher 22 and good looking. She wants to be a college sophomore while her mother would like her to go in the movies. But Judy lives a double life. She becomes interested in the story of a jewel robbery in London. She goes to New York and calls on Capt. Charley Marceau. He suggests Judy and her mother take a trip with him. She takes passage on Capt. Charley's ship for her mother and herself and draws all her money from the bank. Judy finds herself looking for the radio operator with the sea-green eyes—but he does not remember her at first. Then they spend hours together. Judy stumbles on a mystery in Halifax, and gets acquainted on the ship, with one of the actors.

Chapter 23

Judy loitered in the corridor, met Mr. Tennant, who paused to twinkle at the flying mop of curls like a dusky cloud about her head.

"Really thought it was your mother coming along Miss Judy. Declare if you're not the image of her, all blown about as you are."

"Except that mother has light hair and a curve or two, while I'm up and down as a broomstick—thank you just the same, kind sir."

She tossed him a smile, went hurrying along, oddly alarmed. Getting all jumbled like a scrambled egg! Losing her bearings, thrown about like a ship with the compass wrong.

Once she had life all figured out and charted. You had to be serious about life, mind the connection between now and time to come. Study, struggle—this was the way to gain a professorship in some college—Columbia, maybe! Be an authority on your subject with what you had to say talked of everywhere.

In a Flutter
Smile Tossed at Her

Yet, now she was in a flutter because a young fellow had smiled at her, tossed a compliment about her looks, remembered to say she wasn't like a school girl in school her in the least.

"Sen. sir—oh, what's the matter with me? Silly as Betsy Ross. Light-headed. Just because it's vacation. This can't happen. I'll get back where I started from."

So she took down the plainest frock in her new wardrobe offered—a slim little white crepe, sleeveless and short—put it on in a grimly obstinate way, nodded stubbornly as she refused a glance at the mirror.

Not for the world would she have admitted it—not for the world send a star-burst certain things kept running through her head. "With the wind blowing your hair that way—you're lovely, Judy. Like a picture— beautiful—"

Kit Camp saying that, choking up, face all then Tris Millet, lips suddenly straight: "Your eyes—silver gray and full of light. So sweet—"

Peggy was drawing flimsy stockings over her ankles. Judy gave her a quick glance, pretended to be hunting for something on the dressing table, then close to the glass and looked at her eyes. Gray but merely curious; no light in them now.

Nose Red
Where Wind Hit It

Ah—self conscious—thinking of the circle of her head instead of what she could put into it. Stop this quickly enough; the plain little dress would help.

She caught up her hair, strained it back, thrust pins into the knot. Then she saw that the nose was red, sunburned from the wind, and touched with the powder puff. She stood there, restless and uncomfortable.

"Wait, hank—Peggy behind her holding sleeves for her arms. "Dress is only half the costume—there, it catches in front—"

"But—well, I didn't know it was the kind of an outfit—"

She was staring down at a coat-like garment of white chiffon figured with tiny pink and yellow buds, very full of skirt and divided in front over the white slip. It transformed her from a prim young person no one would look at twice to a Dresden Shepherdess stepped from a tinted fan to the lilt of a minuet.

Not the appearance she had meant to make—why, the girl in the mirror was the other Judy! Anything might happen with this secret Judy let loose to wander about by herself do whatever she pleased. Once let her go out of hand there'd be no putting her back between the pages of a book—into the shadows on a movie screen.

"Well?" Peggy's voice was gay, rather proud as she surveyed her daughter. "Like it, baby? Supposing we'd brought

"Pretty as a picture"... but 'B.O.' (Body Odor)

and summer heat kept admirers away

MONDAY—they met. Tuesday—a date. Wednesday—their romance was over. True, it was scorching weather. But that didn't excuse . . . body odor. And in a girl who looked so dainty!

Naturally people hesitate to mention such a personal matter, even under the polite term—"B.O." But finally a friend, an older woman, plucked up courage to tell her and suggest an easy way to avoid offending . . . What a difference it has made! Now she wins friends and keeps them—has "dates" galore. "B. O." and unpopularity are banished forever.

Perspiration can be kept odorless

Even on sultriest summer days when we perspire most, there's no need for even a trace of "B. O." But here's the thing to remember. Don't simply trust to luck that you won't offend. We never know when we do. We quickly become accustomed to an ever-present odor and don't notice "B. O." in ourselves. But others do—instantly!

Play safe. Adopt the delightful safeguard used by millions of particular men and women. Wash and bathe with Lifebuoy. Lathers abundantly—even in hardest water. Rich, creamy, antiseptic lather that purifies pores—removes every trace of "B. O."

"ACADIANS" ON PILGRIMAGE

As the Federal Express pulled in at the South Station yesterday a quaint little group alighted and made its way, laughing and chatting, down the platform to the waiting rooms. The women were attired in prim white caps.

The 17 quaintly dressed men and 30 happy women were the descendants of the Acadians-in-Louisiana going back to Grand Pre after 175 years.

The men and women from Louisiana have covered 1400 miles en route to Grand Pre the scene of the expulsion of the Acadians by the English, where they will join with nearly 5000 other descendants from points in Canada and New England for the 175th anniversary observance of the last tragic parting.

Each member of the party from Louisiana represented one of the 47 parishes in the Louisian-Acadia, which today has 500,000 descendants of the Nova Scotia expulsion.

The group was met at the station by representatives of both councils of the Assumption Society of Waltham, a branch of the national organization of the Acadians.

Date Is Set for Raquel to Sail for Orient With Her Husband

CHAPTER 70

Raquel found it a relief to be back in New York.

Jerry's people had received her cordially. They had accepted her as one of their own. She felt, though, that they resented her difference from their mold. Even the beauty they were forced to admit seemed a matter of suspicion to them, of intrusion.

Secretly, she knew, the women among them envied her this supreme gift of the sex. Just as she could see spontaneous admiration of it, properly cloaked, in the eyes of the men.

Jerry's mother she adored. Jerry and his mother had entered into an open conspiracy to confound these stiff-lipped traditionalists to the limit of Raquel's might. They took delight in seeing eyebrids fly open and mouths form a quickly-suppressed "oh."

"I already 'ove you, my daughter," the fine old lady in the big white house whispered to Raquel between her farewells. "But if you will keep my boy happy, if you will make him a good wife, I shall come as near adoring you as it is allowed humans to adore one another."

Raquel was glad Jerry's mother had not imposed love into her bargain. As it was, she could promise truly that she would fulfill the trust this mother gave into her keeping. But love! That she could not promise. She did not have it to give—had never had it. The Potter had left love out of the alchemy of her making.

Kisses Pancho

Father Is Startled

Pancho was as when they left him. Environment—what could it do to people—for or against them!

Raquel brushed Pancho's brow with the first kiss she could remember ever to have passed between them when she found him alert and full of graceful speeches upon their return.

Pancho hid it skillfully, but Raquel knew he was as startled, as embarrassed, over the impulsive kiss as was she.

"I met a man from Spain the other day," he remarked with evident zest for the subject. "He's been a senor of diplomatic mission. Comes from Cadiz. He was telling me about it. The houses are of Cadiz. It is the seat of the family, since before the Inquisition. I'd like to go there some time." He added, with a quick glance at Raquel, "I'd like to take Lucy."

Raquel nodded. As if he had made the most casual remark possible.

"It would be interesting," she said. "I'd like nothing more. We could do it, eh, Jerry? After we come back from the Orient and rest up a bit."

"Why not?" Jerry shared her enthusiasm. "We ought to show them what this country can do by the way of senoritas."

"Senoras," Raquel corrected, laughingly.

She was troubled about the trip to the Orient. Restless to be away. She needed the rest, the change, because of the giddiness and the weak feeling she hadn't told anyone about. That hurrying to the border with its attendant excitement and bodily fatigue had taken much from her. She had grown soft, unused to dash and to strain.

Jerry was still having his bad nights. The purple pools under his eyes were deeper, darker. His brow was damp and cold when she touched it to soothe his troubled tossing.

He insisted, however, that he had never felt so fit.

"That wise old owl of a specialist has forgotten all about me," he said. "He has given me up as a lost prospect."

Raquel knew better. Only that morning she had talked with the specialist. She did not like the way the famous man of science looked at her when he said she must be patient—that he would have a decision for her within a week.

"Not so far as I have been able to tell," he answered with an air of professional mystery she could not penetrate. "One never knows. There are two or three phases of this case that have puzzled me. The symptoms are not unusual. The thing of it is they do not react to the treatments prescribed. This proves I have been on the wrong track. I have not found the seat of the trouble."

"But surely——"

"I shall be better able to judge of the extent of your husband's indisposition when the report comes from the laboratory. That must be within a few days, at the most." With that he dismissed her.

Oh—if Jerry should—. She squeezed trembling lids over her burning eyes. Drove away the little bundle of fear that clutched and tore at her.

She remembered that Jerry had had a good night, the best for a week. And this morning he was so full of life and ebullient activity that she had shooed him out doors. He had gone off with Pancho for a spin up the Hudson to a country club, where he had a bundle of clubs on ice. He'd like to warm them up again. He might even challenge Pancho, who ought to swing a mean mashie, if shoulders were any measure of a golfer.

Pancho joined in the laugh at his expense

Letter From Greta

Eric Is Married

"There speaks the man from the great open spaces," Jerry chuckled.

The apartment seemed unbearably empty when she returned to it. There was a letter from Greta.

"I was out stepping among the hoity-toity last night," wrote the irrepressible one, "and who should I stumble on shoulder but Lord Eric Stafford—in person. He was there with Lady Eric. He calls her Cynthia, or something, but I don't mean maybe when I say Lady Eric, she's as much a landlord's heart, dearie. And the dear old bean simply reeks of the stables and the hounds. I mean Lady Eric. I think you pulled a dirty trick on his lordship. I bet he has to play "Home Sweet Home" on a hunting horn.

"Alphonse plans to sail in a couple of weeks, and I'm a part of the show. He's doing as well as can be expected, thank you. I've got him all pepped up to a 'Bless you, my children' pitch, so don't you go and spoil the act. You know that brass kettle I blasted on our way up from Deauville? I got it almost filled with used platinum cigarette cases and lighters and silver hip-flasks and what not. The motto hung on the handle is 'Take 'Em Before They Take You.'

"How's Jerry Doing as usual, I suppose."

Eric Stafford married! He had walked in the way of tradition. If she had accepted Stafford! Why, then, she would never have met Jerry. This Jerry, who came to her now, eager and warm. His lips covering hers.

"Great morning," he said. "Even if your father does think golf should be played with teacups. And whom do you think we ran across?"

"Bertie Adams. He said he knew you, dear. He read about our marriage. His congratulations were—well, I guess he meant business, all right. We've poloed against each other a couple of times. What he can't do with a pony!"

Furs That Are Soft

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Aug. 18—Fur coat fashions are so numerous this year that the average shopper will find the process of elimination more difficult than ever. To simplify matters we've limited our choice to the three models sketched. These three fur coats should be a valuable guide as they typify the trend in fur fashions. Variety is obtained by the clever use of dress-like details rather than actual changes in silhouette.

Fur designers agree on these fashion points. Furs must be soft to submit to clever handlings of detail. They must be soft enough to drape into graceful collars, crush into bows and to manipulate into unusual sleeves.

They must look luxurious and feel luxurious whether they are inexpensive or precious enough to become regal. Take the lapin coat for instance. (It's sketched in the center.) If you like soft, flat furs, which are very much in fashion, lapin is an excellent 1930 choice.

The dropped shawl of this coat is an approved fashion idea. It gives the effect of a cape. The cape not only gives extra warmth over the shoulders but it is conveniently adaptable. It may be crushed up close about the throat when a change is wanted.

It's a straightline coat. And there are lots of fashionable straightline coats. But it has a good wrap-over. The two front edges won't part company every time the wind blows.

Curled Furs

Caracul or lamb is always a good choice if you like a fur with a little curl in it. And one model we'd have no hesitation in recommending this year—one which in our opinion will be one of the most popular of all fur coats—is similar to the one sketched.

It's very slightly fitted. Not in an extreme way, you see. Just enough to give the suggestion of the fashionable waistline.

The short shawl collar goes well with this silhouette. It makes the right proportion with the higher waistline effect. And it stands up to a becoming frame for the face

Classic Mink Coat

A third coat that's bound to be a 1930 favorite is the classic mink coat with the straight shawl collar. We've had one sketched at the right.

Notice that all three of these coats are self-trimmed. There's no contrasting fur on them. Not only is that a good 1930 fashion—but a fashion that extends more easily over a long period

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Mrs. Solomon Says—

WHO IS this, my Daughter, that emergeth from the tabernacls, pale and trembling?

* * *

Behold, it is the BRIDEGROOM!

Lo, it is HE, the Dreamer of dreams and Vower of vows, who setteth sail upon the Sea of Matrimony, and embarketh upon the Great Voyage of Discovery.

Yea, he shall discover that not all the days of a man's life are holidays; but that there are also "cleaning days" and "moving days" and rent days, and birthdays, and anniversaries, and rainy Sundays.

He shall discover that he hath acquired the right to have his house swept and garnished and his hose darned, and his buttons sewed on, but hath lost, forever, the right to choose his own amusements and to admire other women, and to rule his own goings and comings.

He shall discover that his most cherished opinions of himself were merely illusions; and that to be "understood" is not always flattering to the vanity nor comforting to the soul.

* * *

He shall discover that a woman hats and frocks do not GROW upon her, but more often come in flowered boxes with bills attached, and that the sweetness of her "personality" costeth ten dollars an ounce.

He shall discover that home is not ALWAYS a sanctuary, but a place where a man weareth off his grouches and a woman weareth out her old clothes.

* * *

He shall discover that the price of one evening's diversion might have paid for a ton of coal, a pair of candlesticks for the library, and a month's rent.

He shall discover that the little love-spats of courtship no more resemble the storms of matrimony than an April shower resembleth a Kansas cyclone

He shall rediscover that matrimony is NOT a safety-vault where he may deposit a woman, and leave her until he happeneth to remember her.

* * *

He shall discover that the theory is a beautiful thing; but that the running of an automobile or a woman requireth much PRACTICE, and the sporting spirit of a gambler

And lo, my Daughter, when he hath made these discoveries, one by one, then shall he make the Great Discovery

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Why Don't They Get the Breaks?

THOSE UNHAPPY people who are always left out in the shuffle—why don't they get the breaks?

Why do others seem to have all the luck?

Take jobs, for instance. They want and need work. They prepare themselves for it with desperate eagerness. Yet, someone else — no brighter, no better dressed is given the preference. Why?

Or at home. Why don't they click with the neighbors? Lastier people, duller people, are loved and sought. Why do folk tighten when they come around?

Elsie Robinson

No use telling them they "imagine" it. They don't imagine it. They do avoid them and discriminate against them. Is it deliberate cruelty? or because—as they so often wail—they're too serious, too refined, too good for our common standards. No, it isn't it's because they're too UNCOMFORTABLE—because they actually emanate waves of irritation and depression, and others quite naturally avoid them as they would any other pest.

Ever see a squid doing its stuff? The squid, in repose, seems a meek enough creature. It does not leap or lunge nor gnash its teeth when you approach. Nevertheless, in its own squiddish manner, it raises particular Cain. For the squid carries within its anatomy a sac of fluid black as ink. And if anything intrudes upon the squid's private waters the squid squirts and the intruder is enveloped in highly disagreeable darkness. From which you may gather why the squid is not a popular beast

Why do some people never get the breaks? Why are they avoided, discriminated against? That's why. They carry within their natures an accumulation as bitter and dark as the squid's ink—an accumulation of resentment, envy, fear, suspicion and self-pity. They think it is a secret accumulation. They do not know that they, themselves project the darkness which defeats them. But they do. For, as the squid colors the waters, so do they inject their poison into their environment.

And that isn't merely a simile. It is an exact statement. Thoughts are THINGS things as tangible as rays of sunshine and squirts of ink. And they make themselves felt. Dark thoughts cannot be hidden.

They squirt themselves all over the persons. They smell—they yell—they jostle and jab. They are infinitely more potent and powerful than physical expressions. Some day we will undoubtedly be able to tabulate and measure certain human vibrations . . . as we now measure wave lengths and volts. Then we will be able to state, in scientific terms, why one person is magnetic and the other repulsive—why one person is sought and the other avoided. But, though we can't do that yet, we do base our judgments on these invisible radiations. And WE AVOID SQUIDS!

Then what's the answer for the unfortunate human squids? The answer is—DON'T BE ONE! Don't accumulate darkness within yourself. Don't—through fear or conceit or cussedness—magnify your grudges until they form an ink sac within you. For if you generate gloom you will give out gloom AND WHATEVER YOU GIVE, THE WORLD WILL GIVE BACK TO YOU!

Heart and Home

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Right to Choose

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a constant reader of your column. I would like your help. I have been going with a fellow for two months. He tells me he loves me and wants me to go steady with him. Recently I met another fellow of my own age, whom I like better than I do the one with. I do not love the first fellow, who I will call A. I do like C very much. One night he saw me with C and told me I should not see C again. We quarreled and I told him he was too old for me. I want to go out with boys and girls my own age and can I do so? Am I not free to come out and still be friends?

PERPLEXED.

Dear Perplexed—You have a right to choose whom you shall and shall not go out with, and if you make it sufficiently plain to A I think he will understand. If he is so jealous, I don't see how you could enjoy having him for an impersonal friend, and certainly not if he tries to dictate to you whom you shall and shall not see

Cannot Live Without Him

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of 18 and have been going with fellows since I was 15 I fell in love with a boy who is in the army. We had planned to be married in December when he is paid off, but last week I got a letter from him saying he was through with me. It seems one of his buddies went back to the ship saying he had given me up on the street drunk. I don't blame him for getting angry, but don't you think he should have more faith in me? I write to him, but he does not answer. Should I keep on writing him or should I forget him, which is one thing I cannot do. I cant live without him — BROKEN-HEARTED BETTY.

Dear Broken Hearted Betty: I do think the young man was rather quick to jump at an opportunity to break up with you. If the whole story is absolutely untrue, I think you may depend on it that he is making it up as an excuse for not seeing you again, especially as he refuses to write to you or hear the truth. Best forget him. You'll find you can live quite well without him. Hearts don't break as easily as we sometimes wish they would.

Goes With Married Man

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl of 18 and keeping company with a young man of 24, who is married but hasn't lived with his wife for five years, or since they were married. He tells me that he really loves me, and would rather be with me than anyone else. I don't know whether I should keep letting him come to see me or not, because it seems he comes just when he wants to. I have been going with him for two years. He doesn't want me to go out with any other boys. He doesn't intend to divorce his wife. He claims he hasn't the money. Tell me, should I give him up, because it doesn't seem we are getting anywhere.

TROUBLED.

Dear Troubled: Here is poor little 18, just beginning to realize what life is all about, ready for the right kind of love from the right kind of man, and she's all tied up with the most selfish and despicable kind of man there is. He asks her to sacrifice her whole future when he does not even offer her the prospect of happiness. Can't she see that he'll take away all her youth and dreams, even destroying the chances of meeting other young men who might love her as she has a right to be loved, freely and honestly, and when he tires of her he will leave her, as he has already left the wife whom he married? Please, dear troubled, break with this man now before it is too late, and your chances of a happy marriage and a home with a good man are gone forever.

Little to Worry Over

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

We are two chums. We go with two other girls who like swimming and to parties, and they seem to pay a lot of attention to us. But I fell in love with one of them, and he seems to like me, for he is always coming down my street to take us swimming, but he never tells me he loves me nor he never asks me for a date. If I see him talking with another girl I get jealous. Could you tell me if he loves me or not? It is the same with my girl chum. She likes the other boy. Would you tell me the reason why they don't date up?

JUST PALS

Dear Just Pals: I should say that there had never been a love story ever, but they must be careful and not let the boys know the exact state of their affections. This, of course, will be rather hard to do, because when you like anyone very much you naturally want to tell them all about it. But men-folks being as they are it is best to wait and let matters take their course

(Miss Fairfax will be pleased to answer readers questions regarding love problems which may be troubling them. Write on one side of the paper only.)

Problems of Etiquette

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Antiques as Gifts

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

We are invited to the wedding of a very dear girl, and my problem is this: I have a very lovely old cut glass bowl. I would like to give this bowl and a sterling silver berry spoon with it, but do not know whether such things are used at all nowadays, and so possibly would not be as acceptable or appreciated as some more modern gift. If you will give me your opinion of the matter, I will be very grateful.

MRS. C. P. S.

Why not give this bowl as a salad bowl, and with it, instead of the berry spoon, give a large salad spoon and fork, the kind that is used for mixing the salad in a bowl of this ample and attractive kind, and that is used afterward for the serving of the salad. So many people now—and I am one of them —like to have the salad mixed in a large bowl, as they do it in Europe

Item in Bad Social Repute

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—Where and when should toothpicks be used—if at all?

2—Are "blazers" ever in good taste—excepting in high school, or when hunting or fishing and so forth? Are they in good taste on the str..et?

MRS. A. G.

2—No. No, except in resorts.

Incense in the Home

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it considered good taste to use incense in one's home? V.T.K

Not if guests are expected, for many people are not fond of this aroma. But if the family likes it there isn't any reason why they shouldn't be given it.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette by readers.

How to Keep Well

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

Too Many Children Lack Sunshine

MANY of the diseases of today are the outcome of artificial ways of living. Whats are known as the "deficiency diseases" attack grown-ups as well as our growing children. Babies are not exempt from them. One of the most common of such ailments is rickets.

Dr. Copeland

This disease appears between the ninth and the 18th month It is unusual in an infant younger than this, and rarely seen in a child older than three

It has been said that fully one-half of the total population of our large cities have rickets to a greater or less degree Too many children in the cities are deprived of sunshine and fresh air, and too many lack proper nourishment.

With the great advance in the number having this disease much experimentation has gone on within the past 10 years to find out its causes. It comes primarily from lack of nourishing food. It can be cured by following the proper diet on the one hand, or it can be cured by exposure to sunlight.

Rickets is not confined to one part of the body, but it involves all the tissues. Its most striking symptom is the abnormal condition of the bones. A child who has rickets is usually anemic and is very nervous and irritable

The effects of sunlight are being studied now as never before. We know that sunlight exerts a profound effect on the welfare of the body

When a child is found to have any of the symptoms of rickets, the diet must be changed. The largest numbers of cases of rickets are found among the artificially-fed babies. Few cases occur among breast-fed infants. Cod liver oil is of great value and should be given regularly An abundance of milk is needed to provide the lime required in building bone tissues. Orange juice, tomato juice and prune juice may be given. For the older children all tinese, with spinach, cabbage and eggs, should be provided.

Exposure to the direct rays of the sun is essential when sunlight is to be had. All the hospitals and clinics now furnish artificial lights which have the same effect. By proper feeding and exposure to sunlight your child may be safe from this disease. The disease is now well understood and by careful attention rickets can be helped and cured in time.

My House

My house must stand
Where storm-tossed flecks
Of spray can reach

My house must have
A bare, white floor,
The sea at the door,

While Summer laughs
I shall run with the surf
About my feet.

As they scream above;
I shall swim far out
Through the waves I love.

And when Winter snarls
At the crouching earth
By the driftwood fire
I shall drowse at my hearth

My house must be
A thing so small

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

IN THE human face there are 55 muscles. They are used when we eat, when we smile, when we frown. Muscles are attached to the skin by means of small fibers. If a woman frowns permanent lines form between her eyebrows, temperament and disposition change our features. The sneery, sniffy woman grows a thin, mean nose

Honest!

There is a newcomer on the toilet table. It is a powder brush made of goat's hair. Powder is fluffed on with a swan's down puff. Put on in a cloud and patted in. Then the brush gets in its fine work. It brushes down from the forehead, taking the powder from the hair line. Then it starts at the chin and jawbone and travels upward. Its purpose is to do away with an uneven application, to insure against spottiness. The pure new brush is not a substitute for that. It is too soft

When copper-colored hair loses its shimmer and goes rusty, the henna pack, combined with peroxide, will restore the natural glint. Mix three tablespoonfuls of powdered Egyptian henna with hot water to form a paste. Now connect one of whipped cream. Add three teaspoonfuls of peroxide and apply to the hair when it is dry and oily. Let remain on seven minutes—maybe ten—and then shampoo. There are no harmful results.

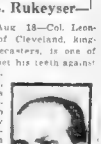
Colonel Ayres Declines Offers to Settle in N.Y.

Flattering Inducements Fail to Attract Him From Cleveland

—By M. S. Rukeyser—

New York, Aug. 18—Col. Leonard P. Ayres of Cleveland, kingpin of the forecasters, is one of those who has set his teeth against the lure of glass-blasting 42 Wall Street. He gets numerous flattering offers to settle in New York. A connection between the Cleveland Trust Company and the Van Sweringen interests has been found a formula for making it attractive for the Colonel to continue his residence in the Middle West.



M. S. Rukeyser

In his monthly business forecast for the Cleveland Trust, just released today, Col. Ayres, after reviewing recent untoward trade developments, carries a bearish-rearguard improvement in business "will probably prove more than merely seasonal."

The sluggishness of the bond market has led some to conclude that the new publishing of stocks as long-term investments has obviated the possibility of a good, old-fashioned bull market in bonds. Col. Ayres the southerner, does not subscribe to this view, but says:

"Bond prices will probably continue to advance as improved conditions appear and develop. Banks, institutions and individual investors will probably hurry to buy after they are sure that an advancing price trend is well established, and long after really low prices have been left behind. As buying wave develops the volume of trading will increase, and we shall once more have an active bond market, with most of the purchasers getting in well up toward the top of the price swing."

In spite of the recession and the curtailed buying of new automobiles, Edsel Ford, vice-president, says statistics of gasoline consumption points out:

"Probably it would require a much prolonged and more serious depression than this one to cause any serious curtailment in the use of gasoline in automobiles. Nevertheless, it is a bit astonishing to discover that the use has been on decrease this year, but that there has actually been no slackening in the rate of increase. Clearly more people are riding more miles in more automobiles this year than ever before."

If the rise in commodity prices following the focusing of attention on the drouth has checked the decline in commodity prices, the development is of first importance to business, according to Theodore H. Price, former rationalistic known cotton speculator and now editor of Commerce and Finance and an authority on the staple commodity.

"Many close observers," Mr. Price points out, "are agreed that as soon as commodity prices are stabilized and hold steady to firm for a convincing period, buying will be heavy, as deferred requirements are covered. Under this heavy commodity surpluses are likely to disappear almost as rapidly as they appeared.

"In an upward price movement those commodities which are now selling below the cost of production will fall into line one by one. In some cases this may happen as spectacularly as in wheat and corn, and it is probable that diversified purchases of the low-priced staples of civilization that are traded in on one of the cotton exchanges, the Coffee and Sugar Exchange, the Rubber Exchange, the Cocoa Exchange, the Hide Exchange, the Silk Exchange, the Produce Exchange, and the Chicago Board of Trade, will show good profits hereafter."

Discussion of business improvement deals mainly with feature. Actual data since the beginning of Summer have registered a decline in activities, which some capable observers believe marks the trough of the recession

ANOTHER TEST WEEK AHEAD FOR MARKET

By FRANK H. MELOON

Another week of test for the stock market is under way. The past week was mentioned by economists as likely to demonstrate something or other showed little doubtfully convincing action. While the bullish forces appeared to have the upper hand toward the end of the week, plenty of big bears are known to be willing to put out short commitments. Small bears showed considerable timidity. Brokers report a lot of good investment buying in prospect with bids somewhat under current prices.

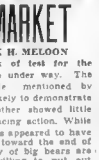
Washington dispatch stating a successor to C. Charles R. Gow, president of Warren Bros., to assume office when Col. Gow formally retires from the Boston postmastership, carries a curious misstatement. It says the custom is to make appointments to first class postmasterships from the Civil Service list after an examination, and that this has been followed in the case of the Boston office in the past.



Charles R. Gow

* * *

We do not recall a case where it was not generally known who would be appointed long before the postmaster to be took his civil service examination. Nor do we recall it, the news that a candidate's name and biography, has been published a period while before the examination.

* * *

Col Gow was drafted from the exclusive circle of best class business executives to maintain the Boston office on a NON-political basis, and did so. Incidentally, he expressed his disgust at certain civil service methods. The Congressional missioners gave out what we called a scolding statement and declared he had no intention of adopting civil service methods. We asked the commission to name the firms and they gave us the names in half dozen or so. When we asked the heads of those firms if they were adopting the civil service methods, they all denied it.

* * *

The company Col. Gow now heads has been called the world's largest highway builder. During the so-called Coolidge prosperity it was one of the outstanding sensations of the New York and Boston Stock Exchanges.

* * *

Speaking of highways, we visited Keene, N. H., last week, and were shown what is described as the world's widest paved highway, running through the heart of the "Gem City of the Ashuelot." We believe that Brockton alone has disputed that claim.

* * *

Several years ago on a visit to Keene we found some suspicious individual had got the sealer of weights and measures stirred into great activity. The sealer inspected the weights and measures of the merchants and found that, without exception, they were giving over-weight and over-measure. This led to Keene's being pronounced "as nearly equalized the most honest city on earth."

The list of railroad and utility bonds legal for savings banks and trust funds in New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts and Connecticut, compiled semi-annually by the Standard Statistics Co. New York, currently contains 1197 bonds against 1180 at the time of the last previous listing in March, 1930.

* * *

Of the total number of bonds only 206 comply with the standards of all four states, 215 with those of three states, 253 with two and 463 with the laws of one state. While New Jersey issues no official list of legal bonds, in the opinion of Standard Statistics 819 of the issues are legal in that state. New York comes next with 740 issues and 618 issues are legal for savings banks and trust funds in Connecticut. Only 461 of those bonds are legal in Massachusetts, this state having most rigid requirements as to the number of consecutive years during which dividends on equity issues must have been maintained.

NEWS OF Trends of the Day MAJOR New York List MARKETS

Commodities' Weakness Gives Courage to Bears

New York, Aug. 18.—Weakness in the commodity markets gave courage to the bears in today's New York Stock Exchange trading. Factors favoring the bear faction also included failure of week-end trade and business surveys to dispel the speculative clouds.

There was also the weakening of the market's technical position by the sharp upturn late last week to inspire profit taking and short commitments for the trading turn.

RALLIES APPEAR

Prices broke rather sharply under moderate selling pressure, many moderate issues tumbling 2 to more than 4 points, but the bear faction again found the market pretty thoroughly sold out, and were unable to shake loose any landslides of general liquidation.

In fact, scattered bulk profits bought on the way down. A moderate rally appeared during the morning, and again in the afternoon.

Shares soon losing 3 to 4 points included Radio, American Telephone, Duplex, Reduction, Eastman, Northern Pacific, Westinghouse, Radio preferred B, and Byers. Baltimore & Ohio broke below 100 with a 3-point loss.

U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Can, Goodrich, American, Consolidated Gas, Sears Roebuck and Fox Film were among the issues selling off 2 or more. Rallies of 1 to 3 points from the bottom levels were numerous, cancelling several losses.

There were a few firm spots. Intersoll Rand, a wide mover, shot up 30 in a few sales and Transcontinental Pacific, Woolworth, United Aircraft, and First National Stores firm. American Can also turned firm.

TRADING PROFESSIONAL

Trading was still of a highly professional character, largely for the account of floor traders, and during the morning the turnover was only about two-thirds of that of Saturday's half-day session.

On the whole, traders regarded the market as in a critical testing area, and were inclined to stay on the side lines.

Brokerage house gossip heard last Friday and Saturday that a prominent statistician would issue bullish recommendations over the week-end proved to have been somewhat misguided, as such gossip often has been in the past.

This statistician, in common with statistical services generally, thought that selected stocks should be bought at these levels for long-term holding, but warned of the prospect of intermediate reactions. There was little tendency in the Monday advices, aside of the statistical services to urge any rapid or immediate accumulation of stocks.

While floor brokers who normally act for the market sponsors of Radio Corp. common took large blocks of the stock at descending levels, this issue proved the choice of the bears as a focal point for their activity.

BEARS IN RADIO

The action of the issue professed to be favorably impressed by the first half statement, showing the successful working out of floor inventories in a demoralized market, but bears questioned the safety of the $3.50 annual dividend on the Class A preferred, since only $1.27 a share was earned in the first six months.

Wall Street was all set for one piece of bad news which failed to appear. Brennecott directors were scheduled to meet this morning, and rumor had it that a quarterly dividend of only 50 cents would be ordered, against 75 cents in the last quarter, but the meeting was indefinitely postponed because of lack of a quorum.

Renewed heaviness of leading commodities aided the bear move. Reports indicating lack of agreement between the Canadian pool and its bankers was unsettling to wheat, and private estimates indicate that while much of the corn crop was damaged beyond cure by the drouth at least some 10 per cent of the crop has benefitted from subsequent rains.

Credit conditions at this center continued favorable, with call loans renewing at 2½ per cent, and funds available in the outside market at 2½. The demand for commercial paper exceeded the supply.

Weakness of the Liverpool market and reports of better weather in the cotton belt, together with indications that the cotton crop had suffered less seriously than other crops, prompted the heavier selling in several weeks.

The October delivery fell well below 11 cents a pound.

In the last hour Brooklyn Union Gas was off nearly 5, Fox Film over 6, Canadian Pacific 5, N. J. Case, General Theaters, Columbia Graphophone, Loew's and Paramount Public 4 or more, and Consolidated Gas of New York was down 3.

A few stocks rallied near the close. Professional operations for the rise appeared in United Aircraft, which made a number of points in active trading.

The closing tone, however, was heavy. The day's transfers aggregated only 1,350,000 shares.

Second Week of Rise for Commodities

For the first time since early April the wholesale commodity price level has completed two consecutive weeks of gains. The Irving Fisher wholesale commodity price index rose last week by 0.84 per cent to a mark of 83.8 (1926 equals 100).

The rate of increase was also faster than that of the preceding week's, which rose by 0.2 per cent.

On the other hand, cattle and finished products went up, this being attributed to possible shortage of fodder and water. In the main, prices everywhere have had natural tendency for improvement.

There commodity prices have been steadily since June 20, compared with the sharp recession the first six months of the year. The Reuters index for the 31 chief foreign rose last week, as French commodities dropped by 0.25 per cent.

What Is Heavy in Chicago Market

Chicago, Aug. 18—Big arrivals of newly harvested spring wheat at Minneapolis did a good deal today to promote selling of future deliveries and to send prices down grade.

Wheat closed heavy 2¼-2⅝c a bushel lower than Saturday's finish. Corn closed 2¾-3⅞c down, oats 1¾-1⅝c off and provisions unchanged to a setback of 30c.

Passes Dividend

Vesta Battery Corp. omitted regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 on the preferred due at this time.

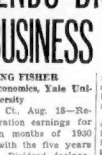
Corporations Are Reaping the Benefit of Surplus Funds

DIVIDENDS BRIDGE GAP TO BUSINESS ADVANCE

By IRVING FISHER
Professor of Economics, Yale University

New Haven, Ct., Aug. 18—Reports of corporation earnings for the first seven months of 1930 compare well with the five years preceding 1929. Dividend declarations during July, 1930, on the average, exceeded those of July, 1929. The majority of corporations paid dividends on a greater number of outstanding shares than existed a year ago.



Irving Fisher

Certain groups gained in payments over July, 1929, such as the railroad and railroad equipment and tobacco groups; bank and insurance, department store, food and packing, oil, mail order and motor equipment groups. The groups that distributed smaller dividends were largely in the steel and public utility groups, motors, coppers, and chain stores. Computations of sums to be disbursed to investors during August total-ling $424,000,000 estimated and dividends, showed this year's shift from dividends to interest.

Whereas dividends amounted to $209,000,000 for August a year ago, the computation for this year is $198,000,000, while the interest computation is $227,000,000 against $201,000,000 in August, 1929. As compared with 1928, this year's showing is instructive. Industrial dividends, for example, which amounted to $112,000,000 in August, 1928, are expected to increase to $153,000,000 this month.

INCOME PLOWED BACK

As all well-managed corporations have been plowing in a large percentage of their incomes during past years of plenty, there is ample warrant in the record of 1930 earnings for the declaration of dividends of normal amount.

For the basis theory of reserves from profits justifies their use as dividends during lean years, to bridge the gap into the next era of prosperity. The Standard Statistics Company estimates an increase in net profits of 403 industrial companies of 27.8 per cent during 1928 over 1927 and of 13.6 per cent during 1929 over 1928.

This represents the amount available for fixed charges after depreciation, and so on. In net income that is the amount available for dividends on stocks after depreciation and fixed charges, there was an increase of 31 per cent during 1928 over 1927, and of 15.4 per cent during 1929 over 1928. But during 1928, such dividends paid on common stock rose only by 11 per cent over the preceding year, while during 1929 they increased by 21.5 per cent.

These percentage increases of dividends are conservative, as compared with the 1929 surplus of 307.5 per cent over 1927 and the 1929 surplus of 273 per cent over 1928. The record from 1923 to 1927, inclusive, as reviewed by President Hoover's committee on recent economic changes, shows extraordinary increases in plowed-back earnings, except in accessories, building supplies and paper.

For the rest of the industries during this period large increases in profits were registered, and an increase in dividend and interest payments by 7 per cent annually. Taking the rate of dividend payments for financial and miscellaneous corporations together, the increase yearly was 0.8 per cent during the 1922-1927 period.

NINE P. C. RATE

The implication from these figures is that the annual rate plowed back for this period exceeded 9 per cent a year. If the dividends were half the earnings, then the earnings plowed back to 11.2 per cent.

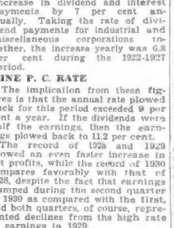
The record of 1928 and 1929 showed an even faster increase in net profits, while the record of 1930 compares favorably with that of 1928, despite the fact that earnings slumped during the second quarter of 1930 as compared with the first, and both quarters, of course, represented declines from the high rate of earnings in 1928.

During the business recession that started in August, 1929, the plowing-back of earnings into plant and equipment has in large part, and quite naturally, been suspended, but current dividends and interest payments have generally been earned. That some of them should be greater than for any previous year to date, is also natural, considering the great momentum supplied to industry by the plowing-back process during the preceding seven years of plenty.

The real economic structure of the nation has been increased enormously. Reinvested earning have a tendency that is cumulative, compound interest. So in the midst of a world depression of commodity prices, with inevitable slackening of industry, American business has been enabled to draw on its reserves and to bridge the gap in the current demand for goods with an even greater distribution of dividends than in the past.

The great industries have not cut wages. On the contrary, they have kept up consumer purchasing power. In addition, cheap and abundant credit is at the disposal of business for its next forward impulse.

(Copyright, 1930 Irving Fisher Syndi.. Inc.)



This comparison, based on data of 35 industrial corporations, indicates an ample reserve of cash earnings to tide over a year of depression.

'BUYING TIME' IS SEEN NEAR

The Babson Statistical Organization, in its letter received by clients today, under heading" Pessimism Will Bring Stock Bargains," says:

"The list of troubles besetting American investors this year has been further added to by the drouth and its damaging effects. This is one more reason why we have been keeping clients from pushing into stocks since last November. Nor do we think the time is yet ripe for a wholesale change of front. On the other hand, the Babson chart is exceedingly low. This means the time is approaching when buying opportunities under Part 1 may appear."

Soft Coal Output Decrease Is Shown

Production of soft coal in week ended Aug. 9 is estimated by United States Bureau of Mines as 7,850,000 tons, a decrease of 141,000 from the previous week and 2,847,000 under the like period of 1929.

Anthracite production in the week of 1,126,000 was a decline of 166,000 tons from the preceding week, but 22,000 above the same week last year.

CURB MARKET TREND LOWER

New York, Aug. 18—Price movement of leading Curb shares was confined to a narrow groove today, with a downward trend in evidence. Forces working for a reaction after the rally that developed on the closing days of last week met opposition at about one point below Saturday's final prices.

Utilities showed no sign of much rallying from the slightly lower prices established near the outset, and only few exceptions ruled barely steady. Electric Bond & Share and American & Foreign Power warrants were exceptions. Electric Bond & Share dipped nearly two points before covering reversed the trend.

American and Foreign Power warrants lost more than its 2 point gain of last week in a thin market. American superpower, American Cities Power and Light B, Niagara Hudson, United Gas, and Utilities Power and Light were steady.

Vacuum Oil which has completed final arrangements to acquire the White Star Refining Company of Detroit, was a soft spot among the oils, while the rest of the group held steady.

Cities Service was dull and in supply a fraction lower. Standard Oil of Indiana and Ohio Oil were firm, the latter gaining a point on the movement.

Cotton Lower in New York Market

New York, Aug. 18—Cotton was easy today at a decline of 17 to 23 points under a scattered sell of the recent selling movement. Trading was active, with the decline extending to 30-110 for the new October and 11.57 for March contracts right after the call, making net losses of 22 to 25 points on the active positions. The decline brought in some buying for the trade and covering, but prices on the active months held within 3 or 4 points of the lowest.

THE PORT OF BOSTON IN REVIEW

By CARL MORRISON

Do fast steamers pay?

That's the question being anxiously studied by the steamship experts. They wonder if the transatlantic service has enough big fliers without further ventures.

An examination of the figures for the first year of the Bremen of the North German Lloyd line, shows that 54,152 passengers were carried about half from the United States. The rest of a round trip on the Bremen is said to be $625, which leaves little margin for profit.

Meanwhile, the Cunard and White Star lines are exercising extreme caution regarding their proposals to build 1000-foot ships to meet the German competition. The United States lines are undecided whether or not to build the proposed sea monsters of the size of the Leviathan.

TODAY'S COMMITTEE

The chairman of committee on customs brokerage and freight forwarding of the Foreign Commerce Club is Walter E. Doherty of J. A. Conkey Co., recognized as one of the foremost customs authority in the East.

On the committee are: M. H. Garvey, M. H. Garvey Co.; C. H. Conant, Stone & Downer; Waldo F. McLaughlin, McLaughlin & Freeman; A. A. Hussey, W. N. Proctor Co.; Harold P. Lambert, H. P. Lambert Co.; H. Brown, C. H. Powell Co.; Raymond Hamson, Patterson, Wylde Co.; J. L. Howland, Davies Turner Co.; F. T. Ostergren, T. D. Downing Co.; J. H. Powers, 32 Oliver st.; W. S. Wade, Youden, Smith & Hopkins; F. E. Wilkie, Rice & Co.; J. C. Burns, Canadian National R. R. Co.; R. H. Rae, Stone & Downer; Harold Rice, Rice & Co.

OFF FOR MISSION

The George R. Cluett is now en route for the Grenfel Mission in Labrador, sailing with a large amount of supplies. These included sewing machines, drain pipes, canned goods, reading matter, 278 barrels of Diesel engine oil, 46 steel drums of gasoline, 34 drums of kerosene and a truck to be used in the mission territory.

The Cluett was delayed in sailing by picking up some wire in the harbor, fouling the propeller for several hours.

TO THE PIER

The suggestion is being heard in several quarters in the harbor that the steamship people or the proper city authorities should place directions on how to reach Commonwealth Pier. Bostonians may be accustomed to taking the bus or other means, but visitors are known to have difficulty in getting headed in the right direction.

That this is true may be learned at any travel bureau. The Boston Evening American in travel bureau lately has received scores of requests from people in Rhode Island and Connecticut, as well as other states, asking exactly how to reach the pier. Small sign posts at South Station and other main points in the city would help.

TODAY'S WHO'S WHO

The subject of today's "Who's Who in Boston Harbor" is Frederic L. Lane, general manager and treasurer of the Nantasket Beach Steamship Co.

Lane is in the limelight this week, as his company today passes its seventy-fifth year of service in the new fleet. The Plymouth is a reconditioned "sidewheeler" of 200 feet in length and with a capacity of 2,500.

The manager Frederic Lane began 41 years ago as a youthful ticket counter and has advanced through all positions. Steamship circles this week are paying tribute to his remarkable achievement of a "comeback" in less than a year, after nearly the entire fleet had been wiped out by a disastrous fire last Thanksgiving.

As general manager, Lane handles more than a million people yearly on his steamers. He lives in Hingham, where the first boat of his line sailed more than a century ago. He has hobbies, his grandson and music. He is director of the Hingham Community Band of 86 pieces.

BOSTONIANS AFLOAT

On the United Fruiter Limon, sailing from Boston, tomorrow, for Havana, Cristilla and Tela, Honduras, were: Elizabeth Hanna, James Plato; John J. Madden and Mary F. Madden, Brighton; Samuel Meaker, Boston.

GERMAN EFFICIENCY

The first steamship company to adopt new rules for handling crowds at Commonwealth Pier as a result of the discussion of traffic jams, is the North German Lloyd line.

When the Karlsruhe was in port Saturday, visitors and passengers noted a system of roped off lanes which prevented any possibility of over-crowding at the gang-planks. Christopher de Groot, local manager, personally supervised the new plan.

GUARD IN ACTION

An example of one phase of coast guard work which receives much less public attention than the duties of preventing smuggling, was noted Saturday. As Bonanza lay aboard a fishing vessel became a widower while at sea, and friends wanted to notify him to return to Boston to care for his children and attend the funeral of his wife. The ship had no radio, so all coast guard vessels were notified to be on watch for the fisherman. The Coast Guard 290 reached the ship Saturday off New Bedford and informed the cook. The man was taken ashore and put on a train to Boston.

MISCELLANEOUS

Edward O. Otis, Jr., who has been export manager of the Chamber of Commerce, has joined the Associated Industries of Massachusetts as industrial relations and merchandising counsel.

Keeping Wages Up

Old Theory of Slashing Is Fortunately Being Outlawed

Slashing of the wages of the working people in a business depression is a savage social philosophy and an economic fallacy as well.

America became the most colossal domestic market in the history of this world. Upon that market has depended the prosperity of this country, as more than 80 per cent of all our products are consumed by the American people.

High wages made of America the greatest consuming public which the world has seen. High wages alone can maintain or restore that purchasing power and secure the quick return of prosperity again.

When the shoe manufacturer in Lynn pays his workers a satisfactory wage, he equips them with a larger ability to consume the grains of the West, to buy the automobiles of the Detroit industrialists and the fabrics of the Lowell, Lawrence and New Bedford mills.

When the farmer receives a substantial income and the Detroit industrialists and the textile manufacturers pay reasonable wages, they are in turn equipped with a larger ability to purchase the shoes of the Lynn manufacturer.

It is a happy circle, the theory of which runs unfailingly through the entire gamut of trade. It has been accepted as sound and vital by all except a few employers who regard their workers as serfs and who belong in the dark ages of social barbarity and economic cowardice.

American business won the major benefits of high prosperity. American business must bear the brunt of any depression. Otherwise it would find itself unable to work itself out of the hollows to the golden road again.

During our past industrial history, any period of depression had inevitably been attended by an attack upon the wage scale. Salary slashes and wage cuts had been regarded as the sensible procedure. "When times are hard, throw men out of work and it will bring back good times," was the merciless and senseless practice. But experience, happily, has convinced our leaders of its unwisdom. They now know they can not destroy the wage earner and his family of their ability to buy food, clothing and the occasional luxury and still expect the wheels of industry to spin.

As confirmation of their acceptance of the finer and sounder philosophy, Mr. George F. Johnson, of Endicott-Johnson, says:

"Wage cutting or reducing the income of labor is not a remedy for business depression. It is a direct and contributing cause. The best place to start necessary reductions of income is from the overpaid and over-privileged, not the underpaid and under-privileged."

Mr. C. E. Palmer, president of Chatt, Peabody and Company, declares:

"In my opinion a general reduction of wages and salaries at this time is entirely unwarranted. Such action would be demoralizing and tend to bring about the very conditions we are all striving to avoid."

Howard Coonley, president of the Walworth Company, declares:

"The Walworth Company has no thought of reducing salaries or wages. In fact, under present conditions, we believe this would be unfortunate, and we see nothing in the future to warrant such a step."

President James A. Farrell of the United States Steel Corporation advises Mr. Schwab that "wages are not coming down in the steel industry," and from other eminent industrialists we receive similar declarations.

Upon the courage and the new progressive atmosphere which surrounds such leaders, we rely for confidence in the future and for the well-being of the workers and their families.

A Republican Blunder

Effort to Destroy Direct Primary

For the past few years the Republican party has had somewhat of a monopoly on political ineptitude in this State. In the olden days they could sit back and wait for the Democrats to make the blunders. But when Mr. Winthrop Murray Crane was gathered to his fathers and when Henry Cabot Lodge was called to his reward, the machine management fell into the hands of a moulting crop, still damp behind the ears, who proceeded to adopt every available opportunity to make themselves ridiculous in the eyes of the public.

The latest manifestation of political incompetency and lack of fundamental Republicanism lies in the decision of the Republican State Committee to attempt to abortize the direct primaries.

They would have a "pre-primary convention," which, we are told, would indorse favored candidates, give to them the full strength of machine backing, no matter how corrupt it might be, and leave the independent Republican candidates to scramble on their own petty resources.

Dress it up in any shape they may, the proposal would ultimately strike a death blow to the power and right of the people of this Commonwealth to select their own candidates in the privacy and sanctity of the polling booth and it is, therefore, an unforgivable affront to them.

The people of Massachusetts will never consent to be stripped of this right, which is the essence of democratic government, and permit the substitution of the packed and manipulated convention with its secret machinations and corruption.

Any party machinists who present such an absurd scheme on the eve of an important State election are evidently bereft of the attributes of sagacious leaders because they are only tempting defeat for their candidates.

We Owe Them Thanks

Workers Making Tercentenary a Success

When we are handing out compliments let us not forget the civic pride of the several thousand men, women and children who are participating in our historical Tercentenary exercises in both Massachusetts and Maine. Theirs has been a laborious task, from the authors who conceived and plotted these pageants and tableaux to the humblest performer who has fashioned the Colonial costume with her own hands and accepted the monotony of painstaking rehearsals. They have revived our recollections of New England's fine history and have supplied us with clean entertainment and we should tell them we are grateful to them.

THE WARNING WRECKAGE

By Nelson Harding

Wrecks along the shore should ever
Serve as beacons to the sailor,
Warning of the reefs and ledges
Hidden when the tide is highest.

And the crooked way to riches,
Holds the wrecks of easy money
And get-rich-quick enterprises.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY -:- By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 18—Diary of a modern Pepys: Came a persuasive telegram from Charles G. Norris to come to the Bohemian jinks near San Francisco. And my wife urged me to but I have played too much albeit others who frolic more accomplish greater things.

So breakfasting off a modernistic chromium table in our new chambers, the black dishes as pretty as ever I saw, and at the moment wonder how I endured living in hotels so many years. Finished my stint and sat watching from mongers on the new Waldorf caterpromenade from my window.

In the evening came upon C. N. Landon, the art editor, and we for a spin in a chanbanc through the park, discussing art, pool and the high enthusiasm of Ray Long. Stopped at the Algonquin to pick up H. N. Swanson and, seeing Frank Case, praised his floating island, but he unmoved. So home, very hungry.

Eleventh avenue broods in sullen languor during hot months a jumble of dark warehouses. Coffee Pots, soft drink and pool parlors. Sidewalks are ersias - crossed with those white - chalked hieroglyphics of slum children's games. Upstairs windows are eternally framed with women whose eyeballs seem lumps of mud—gazing at nothing. Capped men stand on corners in shirt-sleeved indolence. Undertakers in black ties sit in curb chairs. There is not the shrill gabble of the Ghetto, but the foment of unrest is always churning. O. Henry called it "the street that never laughs."

* * *

The most terrifying name in gangland was coined on 11th ave. and bestowed upon Harry Horowitz before he moved to the lower East Side, to be electrocuted later in the Rosenthal murder roundup. Horowitz went from 11th ave. as Gyp the Blood, a sobriquet inspired by more romance than most underworld monikers. He was a pale, dreamy lad who liked to roam the wooded hills of Jersey, a gipsying type—hence Gyp. In lighter moments a dude—a blood. Hence: Gyp the Blood.

An inveterate cigarette-smoking novelist over night lost his nicotine taste astonishingly. For years he smoked from 30 to 40 cigarettes a day. The other week his after-dinner cigarette did not taste right. He lighted another. Same result. Next day the same and for five weeks he has not smoked—every vestige of the appetite vanished. He gained 14 pounds and is happier than all get out.

The dernier cri in glorified doormen graces an East 34th st. cafe. He is roped with gold impressively and stands at attention before arriving limousines. But he does not open doors. A page boy in white duck does that. Meet me at the general uprising.

Last summer every roadhouse cabaret had alert, slick-haired boys who suddenly jumped out of nowhere to burst into senseless rhyming. One slapped a portable piano, another cymbals, still another a triangle, and so on, with all rolling on the floor in epileptic seizures as a finale. No person knows where it all came from and now no one seems to know or care where it has gone.

* * *

The Chrysler building expects to realize $150,000 a year from admittance fees to its observation tower on the 71st floor, and the Woolworth Tower gazing business has improved instead of slumped as a result. View hounds like to compare the two views.

I wonder why buying a hat is such an ordeal at least for me. Today a salesman adjusted one, stood off praising it, suddenly stepped up and tapping my forehead inquired: "Are you all right there?" I should have laughed. But I wanted to bust him in the jaw.

* * *

I suppose every man secretly expects to look like John Barrymore with binoculars over his shoulders strolling through the paddock in a new hat, and the result does things. I walk in for one dripping sweetness and light and come out a potential Jack the Ripper.

* * *

My new hat is called "Gabriel"—a name suggesting a soul. And the way I look in it I am entitled to a three-day crying jag.

H. G. Wells Writes

THE same group of cells which, when the limb-bud is well-grown, can do nothing but turn into a finger tip, a little earlier could have turned into palm or wrist, but not into upper arm.

H. G. Wells

Twenty-four hours earlier, again, they could have been turned into any part of a forelimb. But in the earliest stages of all they could have been switched over to becoming any organ whatsoever, from liver to eye, from brain to bladder.

The whole egg, in other words, behaves first as a single field of organization, if we may use the term; and it gradually becomes divided up into smaller and smaller fields, each different from the rest and with a large measure of independence. The splitting up of the singleness of the early embryo into this patchwork is touched off by the action of the dorsal lip "organizer."

The influence thus set in motion spreads at a definite rate from region to region. For instance, the influence which determines the formation of the eye-lens from a particular area of outer skin has to travel outward from the brain through the optic cup or first main rudiment of the eye.

If, while this influence is traversing the optic cup, the cup be cut out and grafted elsewhere, it still has the power of transmitting the influence to the skin, and so can call out the production of a lens from skin or back of flank.

That the chemical differences thus established persist through life is shown by some remarkable facts of regeneration. If a newt's tail is amputated the cells restore just what is missing. Some influence peculiar to the region of the cut determines what shall be formed there.

If the bud growing out to replace the amputated tail be grafted to some other part of the body, say on to the fresh cut stump of a leg, it will go on developing into a tail, provided it is more than a few days old. If, however, it is grafted on to the leg stump earlier while still a mere boss of cells, its destiny is not yet fixed; it will now turn into a leg instead of a tail.

Back to the Flying Squirrel and the Frog

Everything in Nature Has Its Good Reason

SAILCLOTH FIN FOR PARACHUTE JUMPERS

Ordinarily when the man jumps and pulls the string opening the parachute, there is a sudden, violent and sometimes very painful jerk caused by the sudden stopping of the 'chute.

To meet that difficulty the parachute-jumping costume shown here has been devised.

Of this new and interesting device the Popular Science Monthly says:

"Diving through the air in any direction, like a flying squirrel, is a new pastime for aerial daredevils. The idea was conceived by Rex G. Finney, of Los Angeles, who recently demonstrated a 'tail fin,' a strip of canvas stitched between the legs by which a falling person can steer himself in the air. With this device and similar armpit fins, which Finney plans to add, it is expected that a parachute jumper can loop the loop and do barrel rolls before opening his 'chute.

"The tail fin alone, which acts like the elevator of an airplane, enables a jumper to perform startling feats. When he arches his back and flexes his knees, after acquiring enough falling speed, he actually zooms upward. The stunt has a possible practical use, according to Finney. A naturally top-heavy parachute jumper, with this device, might right himself just before opening his parachute."

Few city dwellers have ever seen that interesting animal, a flying squirrel, with beautiful large eyes and a membrane of living tissue stretched between the hind legs and the fore legs that enables the squirrel almost to fly.

Leaping from a high branch in a tree the squirrel spreads out its legs, creating a real parachute effect that with the jumping impetus given enables the squirrel to sail long distances through the air from one tree to another, without touching the ground.

Man, according to the learned Professor Osborne, head of the Museum of Natural History, lived on the earth 40,000,000 years before he was able to make an airplane and fly.

Many million years before he appeared, expert flying was done by birds, bats and lizards of various kinds.

Nature sets the example, does the thing in a crude way; man improves on it. With his locomotive and his automobile he goes faster than the antelope.
